WU PEI-FU PLANS BIG DRIVE ON PEKING

Military Government Formed With Headquarters At Wuchang

FORECAST OF SCRAPPING OF PROTOCOL ON ARMS DENIED

Omission From Agenda Is Requested By British

ASK MORE TIME

No Desire To Turn Down Scheme Flatly

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, Nov. 18.—The British Government has requested the League of Nations Secretariat not to place the security and disarmament protocol on the agenda of the next meeting of the League Council at Rome on December 8, because it will be necessary to consult the Dominions Governments before Britain is able to proceed with the matter.

(Reuter's Service)

London, Nov. 19.—Reuter learns that the British request to omit the disarmament protocol from the agenda of the Council of the League of Nations meeting at Rome on December 8 in no way means scrapping of the protocol. The position is that the short time before December 8, it is considered will not afford sufficient opportunity for very full consideration of such an important matter in consultation with the Dominions. There is no desire to turn down the present scheme without substitution of a constructive plan.

(Reuter's Service)

London, Nov. 19.—The Diplomatic Correspondent of the Daily Telegraph construes the British request to omit the disarmament protocol from the Agenda of the Council of the League of Nations meeting at Rome on December 8 as a diplomatic euphemism that it is scrapped.

The correspondent thinks this decision need cause little surprise in view of the strong objections by the Dominions and even in one respect by such a staunch advocate of the League as Viscount Grey of Fallodon.

The newspaper is of the opinion that the present action implies a return to the original Covenant, together with a possible elaboration of new procedure for arbitraton on justifiable questions by the World Court at The Hague.

Apology Made To Chilean Consul-General By Police Prosecutor In Open Court

Mr. E. T. Maitland Withdraws Statements Terming Mr. Arce-Saurez "Comic Opera Consul" During Hearing In Mixed Court

An open apology was made yesterday by Mr. E. T. Maitland, Police Prosecutor, to Mr. A. Arce-Saurez, Chilean Consul, in Mixed Court for statements made before the court several days ago.

Mr. Maitland termed the consul "a comic opera consul" before the court when police stated that the Chilean consul had refused to permit the police to arrest Yang Hong-sung, wanted on a charge of operating a lottery without a license. Mr. Maitland also declared that the consul should be arrested for his attitude.

The remarks were ordered eliminated from the records by Magistrate Loh and Assessor Martin after Mr. Maitland had made his apology.

He informed the consul Tuesday that he intended appearing before the open court and acknowledging that he was wrong. His letter to the consul-general follows:

"Being of opinion that it is honorable for a man who has made a mistake to acknowledge frankly his wrong, I have the honor to inform you that I will appear tomorrow morning at the Mixed Court before the British Assessor, Mr. Martin and there in open Court I will state that I unreservedly withdraw all remarks previously made by me concerning you and regretting the occurrence. I will tender you an unqualified apology for the words spoken and the application made by me."

In court yesterday before D. O. Fischer, representing the consul, Mr. Maitland said he had uttered the statemen against the consul in the heat of anger and that his words had been unwarranted. He asked ... had said against the consul be withdrawn from the records.

Assessor Martin, answering Mr. Maitland, said the remarks were serious and that an apology would have been demanded at the next hearing of the case.

In the meantime, Yang is still out of the clutches of the settlement police. He claims he is of Chilean nationality and not subject to the Mixed Court.

PUBLIC OPINION IN INDIA TURNS AGAINST OPIUM

General Discussion Is Opened By Persian Delegate At Geneva

(Reuter's Service)

London, Nov. 18.—The Manchester Guardian, in a leading article, says that there is some force in the Indian argument that by repressing her exports of opium India would merely encourage her competitors to be more ... of ... in India is becoming increasingly aware that opium must be regarded as immoral. Already the All India Congress Committee has moved in favor of abandonment of the opium revenue and prohibition of its use for amenity purposes. By expressing such an opinion in legislation India could at least drive a deep wedge into the Far Eastern traffic and there are grounds for hoping that Persia and Turkey are more likely to support her than they were until recently.

(Reuter's Service)

Geneva, Nov. 18.—At the resumption of the sittings of the Second Drugs Conference today a general discussion was opened by the Persian delegate, who asserted that opium came first to Persia from India. He added that the Persian Government was prepared to adhere to Article III of the Hague Convention on condition that the Conference and the League of Nations assisted Persia in the difficult task of limiting the traffic and use of opium.

The Japanese delegates wished the Conference success. They declared that the guiding principle would be the same as at the first Conference, namely, one of humanity, public health and justice.

After speeches by the Greek and Polish delegates, the Conference adjourned till tomorrow.

TEN DEAD, GREAT MONEY LOSS IN U. S. COLD WAVE

Disasters Follow In Wake Of Severe Weather On Atlantic Coast

(Reuter's American Service)

New York, Nov. 18.—The intensely cold weather and violent winds have been responsible for a chain of disasters. Ten people are known to be dead and a huge loss of property and shipping has been sustained. Steamers are arriving a day late, many encased in ice. Firemen have been handicapped in several serious fires owing to lack of water. Damage to the extent of $1,000,000 was thus caused at the Standard Oil plant at Warner, N. J. Similar damage was sustained at a fashionable hotel at Atlantic City. The hotel was destroyed and two guests perished.

J. V MacMURRAY IS APPOINTED AS AIDE TO HUGHES

Head Of Far Eastern Division Given Post Of Assistant Secretary Of State

(Reuter's American Service)

Washington, Nov. 18.—President Coolidge has appointed Mr. J. V. MacMurray, at present head of the Far Eastern division of the State Department, to be Assistant Secretary of State.

Mr. MacMurray, as a result of many years spent in the United States diplomatic service, has an intimate knowledge of American problems abroad, particularly those which are peculiar to the Far East.

Mr. MacMurray entered the government service in 1907 as secretary to he American Legation and consul-general at Bangkok. The following year, he was appointed secretary to the embassy at St. Petersburg, a post which he held for three years, after which he was transferred to the State Department at Washington, where he was later appointed assistant chief and subsequently chief of the Division of Near Eastern Affairs.

In 1913, Mr. MacMurray served as secretary to the legation at Peking, continuing there until 1917, when he was transferred to Tokio as counsellor to the Embassy.

JOB-HUNTERS WAIT RESULT OF TIENTSIN CONFERENCE

Hungry Mob Lingers On In Search Of Office

DENSE SECRECY

Relations Between Chang And Feng Improving

BY CHARLES J. FOX

(Special Dispatch to THE CHINA PRESS)

Tientsin, Nov. 18.—While a host of watchful waiters here are keeping constantly on the alert in their efforts to extract promises of lucrative public posts from the powers that are soon to be, no one, even they, has been able to pierce the dense cloud of secrecy which shrouds the conferences which are being carried on between Marshal Tuan Chi-jui, Marshal Chang Tso-lin, General Feng Yu-hsiang and others. The three principal leaders continue to carry on their discussions by themselves and there is no one in a position to say just what the outcome has been so far.

The arrival of Dr. Sun Yat-sen ... Canton ... is ... interest, as Dr. Sun's co-operation is greatly desired by both Chang Tso-lin and Tuan Chi-jui.

It is evident that relations between Chang Tso-lin and Feng Yu-hsiang are becoming closer daily.

Tuan Chi-jui is now preparing a public announcement of his views on the present situation. If this announcement meets with general favor, he will proceed shortly to Peking and assume charge of the government there. If not, he intends to return to private life.

It is believed that Marshal Tuan is striving to obtain a peaceful settlement with Wu Pei-fu, Chi Hsieh-yuan and the other Yangtsze leaders. The prospects of the conference are now declared to be bright.

ARMED ROBBERS STEAL $300 AT EXCHANGE SHOP

Fire One Shot In Air After Shop Assistant Blows Police Whistle

Theft of $300 in cash from a cigarette and exchange shop at 285 Broadway was reported to police of the Hongkew station.

According to the story told by the two preprietors of the shop, three men, each of whom was armed with a pistol, entered the shop at noon on Tuesday. There were four persons in the shop at the time, one of whom was a customer. The robbers produced their pistols and commenced a search of the place. None of the occupants offered any resistance.

From the lone customer in the place, the robbers took $150 in cash. They obtained a like sum from the cash drawer. Then all three ran out and escaped down an alleyway leading off the opposite side of the street.

As the three marauders ran out, a shop assistant blew a police whistle. One of the robbers turned and fired a shot in the air to intimidate him. Then all three continued their flight undisturbed. A police constable was on duty nearby but claimed to have heard neither the whistle nor the shot owing to the noise of traffic at the time.

POWERS HOLD UP NOTE TO PEKING URGED BY PARIS

Fear Dispatch Now Might Be Construed As Sign Of Intervention

(BY UNITED PRESS)

Paris, Nov. 18.—The French foreign office has semi-officially confirmed the story published in Le Temps regarding joint action proposed by the Six Powers in China.

An informant at the foreign office today said that the French Charge d'Affaires at Peking had presented a draft of the proposed note to China voicing a demand that all treaty rights be respected to the ministers of the other powers.

The note, as drafted by the French charge, demanded that China give immediate assurances of its intention strictly to observe all treaties.

It is understood that England, America and Japan have approved dispatch of the note in principle, but desire to alter certain details in it and also desire to delay it because they feared that presentation of the note at this time might be construed as the first ste... in foreign intervention in China. Dispatch of a joint note along the lines indicated is expected ultimately, however.

BRITISH GUARD ON WEST RIVER DRAW PROTEST

Canton Officials Wrathy As Patrol Vessels Are Sent Out

(Eastern News Agency)

Canton, Nov. 18.—In view of the fact that British vessels have of late been frequently attacked and damaged by Chinese pirates and bandits in the district of the West River, the Hongkong Administration is said to have dispatched twelve patrol ships to protect British merchant ships in that district.

In consequence, the Canton Government has, it is reported, decided to file a protest with the Hongkong Administration on the ground that water-police power in the region of the West River was regained by China towards the end of the Manchu regime and that the guard-vessels have been dispatched there arbitrarily without any previous notice to or understanding with the Canton authorities concerned.

Hupeh Leader Will Leave Lunghwa Soon, Press Says

Chang Yung-ming, Hupeh military commander, who has been occupying the yamen at Lunghwa ever since the departure of General Ho Feng-lin for Japan and who has been appointed by mandate of the newest Peking government as military governor for Shanghai and Sungkiang, is growing a bit uneasy about the post which he has not yet assumed, according to the local vernacular press.

General Chang's perturbation is said to have arisen as a result of a telegram which he received from Marshal Wu Pei-fu recently, in which the latter urged him strongly to get his troops out of Shanghai without further delay.

General Chang, according to the Chinese press, had been counting on the support of Tuli Sun Chuan-fang of Hangchow, and immediately upon receipt of Marshal Wu's telegram communicated with Tuli Sun. The latter, however, despite previous promises of support, is said to have advised Chang to leave, and his departure is now said to be only a matter of a few days.

It is reported that Chang has sent a delegate to Nankang, and that an arrangement has been worked out whereby Tuchun Chi Hsieh-yuan has agreed to pay half of the expenses incidental to the departure of Chang's troops from Shanghai, the other half to be borne by Tuchun Hsiao Yao-nan, of Hupeh, who is General Chang's immediate superior. Pukow is said to be the ultimate distination of Chang's forces when and if they actually leave.

Signs that General Chang's departure is really imminent this time are found by the Chinese press in reports that most of Chang's soldiers have already left Lunghwa and taken up their quarters in the Hupeh Guild and Hwe Ning Guild near the Arsenal. The press reports that in leaving Lunghwa the soldiers pillaged the homes of many of the villagers, taking with them whatever furniture and goods was transportable and assaulting those who resisted.

YANGTSZE TUCHUNS DRAFT SCHEME FOR INDEPENDENT RULE OF CENTRAL CHINA

Council Of Militarists Will Take Over Control And Appoint Separate Cabinet To Represent Republic In Local And Foreign Affairs Until Constitution Again Becomes Operative; Wu Pei-fu Goes To Chengchow, Honan

(Special Dispatch To The China Press)

Hankow, November 18.—In an interview given to THE CHINA PRESS correspondent here today in his special train, Marshal Wu Pei-fu declared that his speedy departure for Loyang will mean an immediate attack against General Feng Yu-hsiang in an attempt to "drive the traitor from the capital."

Marshal Wu asserted that he is in complete agreement with Tupan Sun Chuan-fang, General Tsai Cheng-hsun, Marshal Hsiao Yao-nan, Governor Chao Heng-ti of Szechuen and other leaders of the Yangtsze Provinces, who, he said, have now definitely established a military government for China with headquarters at Wuchang.

According to Marshal Wu Pei-fu there is no cause for alarm in this section even though Wu-chang is to be the headquarters of the military government. He anticipates, he said, that normal conditions will soon be restored at Peking. It is not expected that there will be any actual warfare in this territory. The great drive will be made on Peking, itself, although Hankow will entrain thousands of soldiers every day for Loyang to assist in the recapture of Peking and the overthrow of Feng Yu-hsiang and Chang Tso-lin.

Marshal Wu Pei-fu is very optimistic regarding his ability to reverse the present situation in the North and is confident of success in the coming campaign which will be started immediately.

Twenty thousand soldiers are to arrive here tonight and depart immediately for Loyang.

Marshal Wu asserted that he has 200,000 troops ready to concentrate in his attack on Peking. Marshal Hsiao Yao-nan and General Chao Heng-ti are sending troops to assist him.

Marshal Wu left Hankow at 6 o'clock for Loyang going via a special train which had been arranged for him. During his brief stay here, he entertained hundreds of visitors.

(Special Dispatch To The China Press)

Hankow, November 19.—As the outcome of the conference held here and in Nanking at the direction of Marshal Wu Pei-fu, a new military government has been proposed by the district and provincial heads of Central China who have adopted the following resolutions:

"1. Now that the legally constituted government has been rendered incapable of functioning and the constitution has become inoperative a military government for the protection of the constitution is hereby formed by the high provincial authorities herein represented.

"2. The place of government shall be situated in Wuchang.

"3. This military government for the protection of the constitution shall for the time being represent the Republic of China in all domestic as well as in all foreign affairs.

"4. Following the principle and in accordance with the existing laws that the chief executive of the country is the high commander-in-chief of the army and navy of the country and that the high provincial officials are the high commanders of the armies and navies of the respective provinces, this military government shall be administered by these high provincial officials in their

Crime Conditions Here Worse Than Since 1913, Police Report Asserts

The big increase in crimes of violence in the Settlement, resulting directly from the post-war chaos and widespread sale of arms in the immediate vicinity, is summarised by Major A. Hilton Johnson, Acting Commissioner of Police, in his monthly report for October which is published in today's issue of the Municipal Gazette.

In all, thirty-five cases of armed robbery occurred in the Settlement during the month. A foreign sergeant, a Chinese constable and three civilians were shot, and two civilians were stabbed.

"The record shows a heavy increase in this class of crime (armed robberies)," Major Hilton Johnson writes. It is, he says, an aftermath of the recent disturbances which was fully anticipated and with which the police are making every effort to deal.

"Automatic pistols and ammunition were sold openly by soldiers in large quantities in Chapei following the retirement of the Chekiang forces on Shanghai," the report continues. "Numbers of ex-soldiers have since that time become brigands and many reports of robbery, incendiarism, rape and murder have been brought in from the surrounding country. From the point of view of the maintenance of peace and order in the Settlement, local conditions are worse now than at any time since the revolution 13 years ago."

The report makes specific reference to the encounter in which Police Sergeant B. B. Boddy was shot and seriously wounded in an attempt to halt a gang of armed robbers and voices high praise for the police officer's bravery, unarmed and dangerously wounded, in pursuing and arresting one of the men.

"I feel sure that the high degree of courage shown by this young sergeant who has been less than two years in the force will com-

MILITARY COUNCIL

"5. All state affairs shall be decided by these high commanders in a council, which shall be presided over by a president and a vice-president. The president and vice-president of the council are to be elected by the said high commanders among themselves.

"6. Such high commanders as are unable to attend meetings of the council may appoint delegates to represent them.

"7. The military government for the protection of the constitution shall consist of: First, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs; Second, the Ministry of Home Affairs; Third, the Ministry of Finance; Fourth, the Ministry of War; Fifth, the Ministry of Communications. Each ministry shall be under the control of a minister and a vice-minister who will serve directly under the high commanders in council.

"8. This military government shall be dissolved when the constitution becomes fully operative again.

"9. Alterations in the above articles, if they are found unworkable, may be made from time to time by the high commanders in council.

EFFECTIVE AT ONCE

Hankow, Nov. 18.—Marshal Wu Pei-fu granted an interview to Reuter's Correspondent this morning on a train at Kilometre Ten. He appeared to be in excellent health.

The Marshal, on being questioned with reference to his pronouncement regarding the "Military Government," said that the main object of the combination was the maintenance of the Constitution and of real peace, also the propagation of morality in China which was impossible under the present regime. The plan of a Military Government, he declared, was mooted from purely patriotic motives and, in his opinion, was the only method by which such aims could be attained, as the country could not exist under its present controlling forces. He said that Wuchang would be the central point for the exercise of authority until satisfactory and normal conditions had been restored when the seat of government would revert to Peking.

Marshal Wu stated that in case of necessity he could mobilise 20,000 (?) troops. He declined to state his immediate intentions but said that as he and his allies controlled practically three-fourths of the country he had reason to be very optimistic with regard to the future.

Reuter's Correspondent asked Marshal Wu the reason for the debacle on the Northern front. He replied that it was a very simple matter to explain. It was caused solely by the defection of his second and third armies which not only deserted but turned against him, thus making seven armies against his one at Shanhaikwan.

With regard to Marshal Chang Tso-lin, Marshal Wu merely remarked that there were apparently differences between the Manchurian war lord and General Feng Yu-hsiang.

He said that he had not yet definitely decided upon his immediate movements, but that he would probably proceed to Loyang today or tomorrow.

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Hankow, Nov. 18 (Later).—Reuter's Correspondent is officially informed that Marshal Wu Pei-fu is leaving Hankow at nine o'clock tonight for Chengchow. According to present arrangements he will remain there about two days and then proceed to Loyang.

Peking, Nov. 18).—General Ma Lien-chia, Director of Military Affairs of Anhwei, finding himself unable to cope with the agitation against him started by various quarters, especially those militarists who belong to General Wang Fu, Pacification Commissioner of Anhwei, on the 16th instant wired to Anhwei provincials residing in Peking expressing his intention of resigning his post.

HSIAO IS HOLDOUT

(Eastern News Agency)

Hankow, Nov. 18.—At the military conference last night, Marshal Wu Pei-fu is reported to have suggested that twelve provinces in Southeast of China should be united for the establishment of a "constitutional government" in Wuchang in order that they may oppose General Feng Yu-hsiang.

It is understood that General Hsiao Yao-nan, Tuchun of Hupeh, up to last night failed to agree with Marshal Wu's suggestion, insisting upon the maintenance of peace and order as well as the protection of the populace within the domain of the allied provinces.

mand the admiration it so well deserves," Major Hilton Johnson writes.

Other serious crime during the month included the attempted murder of a Sikh Havildar and a Chinese informer by a gang of armed robbers on October 10, the murder of a Chinese on Ichang Road on October 21, the attempted murder of a foreign Police Sergeant and another foreigner by an armed robber of Oct. 22 and the murder of an ex-officer of the Chinese Army on October 29. Eight persons were arrested in connexion with these crimes.

Five foreigners and 3 Chinese were arrested for trafficking in firearms and 39 pistols and 4,862 rounds of ammunition were seized. Sentences of imprisonment ranged from a fortnight to 18 months.

Reports of property stolen totalled 424 of which 147 cases were investigated by the Police with successful results.

No strikes occurred in October and there were no signs locally of any labor unrest.

The price of rice increased from a maximum of $16.50 a picul at the end of September to $19 a picul on October 6. It remained at that figure for a week and then decreased steadily until at the end of the month it had fallen to a maximum of $13.50 a picul for the best quality grain. At no time during the fighting was there any serious shortage in the food supplies of either foreign or Chinese residents in the Settlement.

HERRIOT TELLS BASIS OF POLICY TOWARD SOVIET

French Premier Denies Any Intent To Influence British Election

(French Wireless through Reuter)

Paris, Nov. 18.—M. Herriot stated that recognition of the Soviet Government was necessary both from an economic and political point of view, but France would not surrender any of her rights in this respect.

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, Nov. 19.—M. Herriot outlined today before the Chamber of Deputies' Committee of Foreign Affairs the reasons which weighed with him in the matter of the recognition of the Russian Soviet Government.

In the course of his address, the French Premier stressed the necessity for a close survey of Bolshevist policy in Asia, the Colonies and the Protectorates. He indicated that Poland and Rumania had been consulted, and had made no objection against recognition.

In conclusion the Premier stated that in recognising the Russian Soviet, he by no means had intended to influence the British elections. It was a mere accident that the Soviet's answer reached the Quai d'Orsay on the eve of the elections in Great Britain.

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, Nov. 19.—According to the Petit Parisien, M. Herriot in the course of his statement to the Foreign Affairs Committee of the Chamber of Deputies in regard to Russian recognition, declared that the Bolsheviks were carrying out an active propaganda in French colonies and protectorates, which it would be necessary to closely watch.

The program of the Franco-Russian conference would include the revision of the treaties with the former Russian Government, diplomatic and consular clauses, the regulation of movements of the respective nationals, the settlement of past loans and State and private property in France and Russia, the application of the new regime regarding private property and the application of national laws.

A Communist deputy suggested that Russian debts ought to be considered on the same basis as Inter-Allied debts, but M. Herriot declared that such a parallel was unjustified.

Dominions To Be Given More Help In Wembley Show

(Reuter's Service)

London, November 19.—In connection with the proposed reopening of the Wembley Exhibition in 1925, the Times understands that the Government intends to propose to parliament to increase the national guarantee to the exhibition from the present figure of £600,000 to £1,000,000. The difference would be placed at the disposal of the Exhibition Board which would then be enabled to help those Dominions, Colonies and Dependencies which feel that they are not in a position to bear the whole cost of a further exhibit.

The paper adds that there is reason to believe that an exhibit would be arranged in a number of cases if some such help were forthcoming.

OCTOBER SHOWS HIGH RECORD OF ACCIDENTS HERE

Seven Killed, 246 Injured In Mishaps In Settlement During Month

Traffic accidents in the Settlement during the month of October totalled 596 as compared with 472 during the same month last year, according to the monthly report of Major A. Hilton Johnson, Acting Commissioner of Police, which appears in today's issue of the Municipal Gazette.

Seven persons were killed and 246 injured last month. In Oct. 1923, four persons were killed and 200 injured.

All of those killed met their deaths in motor car accidents, which also accounted for 140 of those injured. A total of 31 motor car accidents were reported during the month as compared with 192 during October, 1923.

Five of the persons killed and 94 of those injured were known to be at fault.

Time to Start Winter Fires

THE setting in of colder weather brings with it an increased number of fires due to faulty heating apparatus and defective chimneys and flues. Statistics show that 7½% of all fires in the United States originate from this strictly preventable cause. Though statistics are lacking it is fair to assume that a similar ratio prevails here.

NOW is the time to overhaul heating plants and chimneys. Our Fire Prevention service is at the disposal of industrial and mercantile insurance risks in connection with the proper installation of new heating apparatus or the inspection of present plants. Good insurance advice may mean a better rate for you and—more important—may prevent a costly fire with its consequent interruption of business.

Sun Yat-sen Entertains Newspapermen; Support Is Asked For His Confab

Southern Generalissino Will Proceed To North T Advocate Holding Of National Conference Immediately

Optimism regarding the political situation was voiced by Dr. Sun Yat-sen, the Southern leader, at a reception given by him at his residence at 29 Rue Moliere yesterday to local Chinese journalists. More than 30 leading newspapermen were present and the Canton Generalissimo spoke on his plan for the holding of a National Conference at which all the thinking Chinese will be given an opportunity to assert their rights.

"During the 13 years of chaos, the people have failed to assert their natural rights and allowed the militarists, who should be their servants, to govern and misgovern them," said he in part. "Now that Tsao Kun and Wu Pei-fu have been crushed and militarism had fallen, the time is opportune for unification of the country by peaceful means.

"The three principles of nationalism, democracy and socialism are the sole basis on which a permanent solution of our problems can be achieved and I am going to North China to see the revivification of the principles. I realise that there are militarists in the North who may repeat the offences of Tsao Kun and Wu Pe-fu. It will be my aim to secure what the people really want and help to restore to the people the rights which they justly possess.

"You see in front of my residence, there are two Annamite policemen. They are armed. I appreciate their services. But I would not tolerate any interference on their part with my home affairs. Those who successfully overthrew Tsao Kun and Wu Pei-fu deserve recogultion. But they were merely doing their duties as watchmen or guards. They should remain as servants and not to turn masters of our house.

"To achieve this, the calling of a National Conference participated by representative citizens is of great importance. I shall organise this conference as soon as I reach the North. The voice of the people must be heard and their orders obeyed. The militarists or the so-called leaders are there only to carry out the orders and not to give them.

"I have abandoned my own military plan in the south, for the preparation of which I spent the last two years. I am going to the North to emphasise the importance of administration along democratic lines as our country has adopted a Republican form of Government. If the leaders now in North China can subscribe to my principles, well and good! Otherwise, they can keep their imperialistic government and I will come back to continue my revolution against the imperialists and militarists."

Dr. Sun then outlined the organisation of the national conference, which, in the absence of an authoritative census, would consist of representatives of the recognised public bodies, the political parties, the educational associations, the chambers of commerce, the agricultural associations, the student unions and other industrial and commercial organisations. Whether the journalists desired to have representation or not was a matter for them to decide and he undertook to see that they were represented if the majority decided to do so.

The aim of the national conference, according to the speaker, will be the abolition of militarism and of imperialism in order to give relief to the general populace. He would seek to abrogate all unequal treaties forced on China by the foreign powers, including the abolition of extraterritoriality and retrocessions of concessions and settlements and revision of the tariff.

Dr. Sun concluded with an appeal for the support of the press in the realisation of his ideals. Responses were made by several prominent newspapermen.

Dr. Sun announced that he would leave as soon as shipping accommodations could be secured. At present all available cabins on the Northbound steamers have been reserved.

U.S. Industry Must Solve Own Tangles, A.F. Of L. Declares

(Reuter's American Service)

El Paso, Texas, Nov. 18.—The annual report of the executive of the American Federation of Labor declares that industry must solve its own problems or face the alternative of State intrusion, which would lead to bureaucracy and breakdown. It points out that there are now 23 banks owned by Labor unions with resources estimated at $60,000,000. Proposals for a general labor life insurance company have been investigated by a committee which expressed the opinion that it was advisable for the unions jointly to adopt some form of proper insurance but opposed the suggestion that the Federation itself should engage in insurance business.

New Bus Lines To Be Operated Soon

Notification that the China General Omnibus Company intends to open service soon on part of Route 1 and the whole of Route 10 is contained in today's issue of the Municipal Gazette. Route 1 extends from the Bund to Carter Road and Route 10 from Carter Road to Brenan Road, via Connaught Road. Pending completion of the relaying of the tramway track in Bubbling Well Road between Carter and Mohawk Roads, the buses will proceed via Mohawk, Weihaiwei and Yates Roads.

Court Decision Increases Receipts Of N. Y. State

(Reuter's American Service)

Washington, Nov. 18.—A decision increasing the annual receipts of New York State by $300,000,000 was given today by the Supreme Court, which held that the franchise tax on foreign corporations doing business in the State was constitutional. Two cases were involved in the suit, which included a firm of British brewers who contended that the tax was not estimated upon the firms sales in New York alone but upon part of its business outside the United States.

Shares Are Allotted In Germany's Debts

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, November 19.—In connection with the allocation of Germany's pre-war public debts in respect to the transferred territories, the Reparations' Commission has decided that Belgium's share shall be 640,609 gold marks, Dantzig's share 5,763,729 gold marks, Czechoslovakia's 248,879, Poland's share for Upper Silesia 1,750,361 and for other terrritories 17,121,458 gold marks.

Overtime Strike On Australian Ships Is Brought To An End

(Reuter's Service)

Sydney, Nov. 18.—The overtime strike has ended. The dispute regarding the Commonwealth liner Ferndale has also been settled, but the liner Moreton Bay is still tied up. (It will be recalled that the Stewards' Union refused to replace 47 stewards of the latter vessel whom the management dismissed because they had refused to attend two insane passengers.)

Formation Plan Of Chinese Characters Is Described

Methods of forming new words by Chinese characters were explained last night at Union Church Hall by Rev. J. Darroch, of the Religious Tract Society of London.

The earliest symbols were pictures of such elementary objects as untutored man would wish to speak about. These are the radicals of the language, the root words upon which the more complicated pictograms are built. So you have characters representing the sun, moon, hand, eye, mouth, hill, water, hre, earth, etc. These are simple symbols. Pictures of the thing seen. In the course of centuries they have been modified and simplified but by means of the great dictionaries of the Chinese language, which show the ancient forms, the original symbol can be, to a large extent, reproduced.

From pictures of things the early writers went on to make pictures representing ideas. These were symbols for above, showing one thing above another. And for below which is just the former character reversed and so getting one thing below another.

Then came the combination of existing symbols to indicate new ideas. Thus the pictures of the sun and moon, which had become familiar through use, were combined to indicate the idea of "brightness". These being the two brightest objects known to man the combination was very appropriate. Or the symbol for hand was placed over the symbol for eye thus suggesting a man shading his eyes to see clearly and from the two nouns was deduced the verb "to see."

After this came the combination of two or more characters to set forth a complex idea which no single pictogram by itself could fully delineate. Thus, the modern word "Republic" had to be formed out of already existing characters and an astonishingly perfect combination was found. The words used for Republic are "Kung-hwo". The first word, "kung" is a picture of four hands bearing something up. It suggests "mutual help", the second word "hwo" is composed of the radical for "grain" and the symbol for "mouth". It is a picture of the earliest musical instrument made by man: a hollow grain-stalk applied to the mouth to make a Pan's pipe. The character alone means "harmony" and so the combination of the two words "harmony and mutual help" make the word "Republic". The idea is certainly excellent though its realisation by the Chinese has been very imperfect.

After the combination of words comes the formation of sentences and in these, too, the language retains a picturesqueness that makes Chinese a vivid language to read.

The lecturer stated that all writing in the beginning was symbolic and only became phonetic when mankind had progressed a considerable distance on the path of civilisation. The cave man who made pictures on the bones of animals taken in the chase were the first to practise caligraphy. The Red Indian who makes a drawing with a piece of charred stick on a strip of birch-bark and expects his squaw to understand the meaning of his drawing is taking the first steps in literature.

All nations began their literary efforts by making pictures of the things they wanted to say. The Chinese, alone, have not abandoned the pictogram for the phonetic alphabet. All other nations convey their meaning by means of symbols representing sounds; the sounds form words and sentences and so you have a written language. The Chinese writing is in pictograms, that is, pictures of the objects about which they wish to speak or ideograms, that is, pictures suggesting the ideas they wish to convey to the mind of the readers.

Union Church Seeks Money For Building Of Darwent Memorial

Committee To Ask Contributions Of Tls. 35,000 In Honor Of Late Pastor

Plans for the construction of a memorial in honor of the late Rev. C. E. Darwent, for more than 20 years pastor of the Union Church, were furthered this week with the announcement of a campaign to raise Tls. 35,000 to pay for land and a new building on Yu-yuen Road, near the Public School for Girls.

The purchase entailed an overdraft on the bank. To clear this and to erect a building which will answer the purpose for which it is designed and be a worthy memorial of the man whose influence reached far beyond the bounds of his parish, it is estimated that Tls. 35,000 will be needed.

The committee has issued an appeal to the church and the community for this sum. Times are hard and this may seem a great deal of money but the Shanghai that built the present Union Church and the Cathedral was a comparatively insignificant city with a meagre population.

One man, residing in the Eastern district, has offered to give $1,000 now and another thousand in 1925 if 20 others will contribute the same sum. A committee met in the Union Church Hall Tuesday to consider means of erecting a Memorial to Rev. Darwent. The other plan was to place a tablet or a stained glass window to Mr. Darwent's memory in the church in which he ministered.

the phrase which is called a slogan—

Believing that those interested in our Contest will be glad to hear an expert on "What a Slogan Is" we reproduce hereunder, considerably condensed, an article from the Manchester Advertising Review on the subject.

THERE have always been slogans. Doubtless primitive man used them for the word itself is ancient, "sluaghghairm" being derived from the Gaelic meaning "outcry of a host," or "war cry."

But the slogan has acquired a wider meaning. It is now applied to any short, crisp phrase which may be repeated ad libitum as an interjectory aid to almost anything.—war, politics, business. A slogan is a rallying point, a shout of attention.

From early times, the slogan has been seriously applied to affairs, often deriving from the saying of a great man. Cato's delenda est Carthago (Carthage must be destroyed), Nelson's "England expects Every Man to do his duty", "Liberty, Equality, Fraternity" produced by the French Revolution, and others, in war & politics are examples.

Thus it is evident that the slogan is an ever recurring note in human life for it best achieves the desirable end of reducing to its briefest form an appeal for wide, popular approval.

This appeal should be "pemmicanised" into a command, a broad hint or a statement. But geniality and good humour are essential. Humour is permissible, but too much wit is dangerous.

Psychological values rather than phraseology should be studied. Many an advertising slogan, no more than bald, apparently dull statements has done good service. "Matchless for the complexion" is a good soap-seller because it makes an emphatic claim to produce something which most women (and men too!) desire. On the other hand is the slogan for insecticide "Spare the spray and Spoil the Fruit" a wittily parodied proverb.

Both of these slogans are good of their different kinds, but neither is as good as such familiar brevities as "Touches the spot," "Zog it off" (for a paint cleaner, "Best in the long run" (a motor car), "They satisfy" (a cigarette, "The pleasure's yours" (a movie producer) and countless others. It is the business of the slogan to get itself repeated, to facilitate which a slogan must be "brief, bright and brotherly."

The perfect slogan is a phrase and not necessarily a sentence. It must be quickly read; the ideal is one phrase of from three to six words; it must carry its message instantly without further argument and it must impress itself on the memory. All this looks easy—but is not as easy as it looks.

Slogans are born, not made. Many a man has been visited by a good slogan, as by an angel, unawares. But most slogans deserve to be born again and born different.

Eleven Teams Entered For Foreign Basketball League In Shanghai

Big Season Looked Forward To; Games Start December 1, With Two Games Nightly At Pavilion

No less than eleven teams are entered for the Foreign Basketball League here, which promises the biggest and most successful season which Shanghai has yet had in this splendid indoor sport. All teams were represented at last night's meeting of the League, and games will start on December 1.

With such a large number of teams, two games will be played every night in the week, giving each team two or more matches weekly. The matches will generally be held at the Pavilion at Pioneer Field, and will start early in the evening, the first game at 5.30 and the second an hour later. There is an excellent floor, and a gallery for spectators, at the Pavilion.

MANY ENTRIES

At the meeting held by the League last evening, at the Shanghai Rowing Club, entries were officially made by the various teams, as follows:

Canadian National Railways ("Canucks");
Shanghai Rowing Club, two teams, "Strokeside" and "Bowside";
Shanghai Recreation Club ("Recs");
Shanghai Amateur Baseball Club ("Scott Co.");
American Navy ("Gobs");
American Co., S.V.C. ("Yanks");
Machine Gunners;
Koreans;
"Orioles";
Portuguese Co., S.V.C.

MOST TEAMS READY

Most of the teams, particularly the Rowing Club quintets, the Recs, the Navy team, and the Koreans, have already gotten into shape, and would be ready to play a game tomorrow. The Baseball Club's five and the American Company's team are now in process of being formed. The American Navy team will be from the two gunboats "Pigeon" and "Penguin", both of which have promised to see to it that a representative Navy quintet will be always on hand for the League games.

Several of the teams, including the Canadians, the Baseball Club, the American Company, the Machine Gunners, and the Koreans, will use the Pavilion for practice purposes, lacking a basketball hall of their own, and last evening the respective evenings for each team there were decided on. The new Pavilion is already in shape for play, everything being pretty well completed except the baths, which will be ready about the end of the present month, before League play starts.

REFEREES AND COMMITTEE

The question of referees was gone into at last night's meeting. Dr. Gray (Secretary of the League), Harry Kingman, Dr. Swan, K. C. Shen, and L. Goldman were proposed, and are being communicated with.

Nominations were also made for the Committee. E. T. Nash, Vaughan Brydone-Jack, L. Goldman, K. C. Shen, and Roy Roberts were chosen as committee-men.

The large number of entries was quite unexpected, and beyond the fondest hopes of the promoters of the League. Six teams had been looked forward to, and there were hopes than eight might be formed, but such a big number as eleven was hardly thought of. As a result, the skeleton schedules drawn up, which even two days ago were on maximum basis of nine and ten teams, were found inadequate, and the program of matches must be worked out again. This will be done in a few days more, and by December 1 League play will start.

PIONEER FIELD PAVILION

The construction of Pavilion at Pioneer Field has given a real home for basketball in Shanghai, and the League games will be played there in the main. There is a splendid floor here, in fact the only floor in Shanghai where adequate space, unobstructed and well lighted, where a player is not in constant danger of being badly bruised against a wall, is provided for basketball players. There is a clear space here of 40 x 80 feet for the game, with five feet of free space outside of it. There are also dressing room and baths, and the place is available at all times.

As regards the public, there are seating arrangements for seven hundred persons. The building is of wood, but well built and weather-proof, and can be heated. There has never before been such a place available for basketball in Shanghai, and the one thing which has been lacking for the wide development of this sport here is now provided.

The Pavilion is conveniently located, on the whole, and can be reached easily if one knows the way. Located at Rue Amiral Bayle and Rue de l'Observatoire, it can be reached readily by auto, of course, while anyone living in Frenchtown will find it very convenient. From most places in the Settlement it is best to go to Mohawk Road via Bubbling Well Road, if one goes by streetcar, getting off at Mohawk Road (the Race Course) and taking a ricsha straight out this road, about seven or eight minutes' ride. It is a direct run, as Rue Amiral Bayle is the Frenchtown continuation of Mohawk Road. The auto buses are also convenient, and stop close to Amiral Bayle, from where ricsha can be taken, it being a four-minute trip from Avenue Edward VII.

Chinese pronunciations may come in useful to visitors. Pioneer Field is known as "Dee-yih-bong-ju-zan," Rue Amiral Bayle is "Ba-la-loo" and Rue de l'Observatoire is "Tien-ven-dal-loo."

Small Bore Rifle Club Shoot Here On Sunday Next

The Small Bore Rifle Club announces that final arrangements have now been made for their meeting to be held on Sunday next. The shoot will commence at 9 a.m. sharp, and all competitors are requested to be present on time. Corps Q-M-Sgt. Rose will be the Range Officer, assisted by the Club Committe.

It is hoped to complete Events 1-3 during the morning, also, if possible, the Ladies' Medal, the afternoon to be taken up with the Unlimited events.

The final for the Vickers Cup at 200 yards will take place only on condition the full range is available during the afternoon or evening.

The Prizes will be on view at the range, and Mrs. Ransom has kindly consented to again present these to the winners at the close of the shoot. General practice can be had on Saturday afternoon next and Unlimited cards may also be fired then.

Entries will close today (20th) and late entries will be charged $5.

The Club is open for more shooting members. It has splendid ranges. There are now quite a number of small bore rifles in Shanghai, and it is a proved fact that an expert small bore shot can easily master the full bore weapon, so small bore shooting gives cheap and useful practice.

With increased membership and increased income, the Club intends adding many improvements to the range, this in the way of snap shooting, moving targets, and sporting practice. They ask all small bore enthusiasts to come along in and help.

Fuh Tan Draws With Southeastern In College Football

Fuh Tan University played a scoreless tie game with Southeastern University at Kiangwan yesterday afternoon. The ground was slippery on account of the rain, and the game was scrappy.

At the end of the regular time there was no scoring on either side, and an extra period of twenty minutes was played. At the end of this time, however, the score sheet was still blank, and owing to the darkness it was agreed by both teams to declare the game a tie.

German Football Team Beats French By 3 To 0 In Paris

Paris, Oct. 11.—The German champion workmen's football team today defeated the French champion workmen's team, 3 to 0, in the first soccer match the former enemies have played in France since the war. Previous games had been played between French and German teams only in the Rhineland.

Last year impromptu soccer games were played in Germany between German and French teams, but in every case the teams that went under the name of French were not composed entirely of Frenchmen. Arrangements were made to have a team from Metz meet one from Germany last season in Metz, but after arrangements had been all but completed the negotiations snddenly were brought to an end. Although no official explanation ever was announced, it was stated that the Governments of both countries frowned on the meeting.

Ye old time country editor in America whose heart always beat faster when the fall days came because he knew that Farmers Smith and Jones and Johnson would soon be in town with a prize pumpkin or a bushel of potatoes with which to pay the annual subscription, had nothing on ye modern time editor in Shanghai this week. The reason for this outburst being the receipt by Shanghai editors yesterday of complete samples of Mr. Thomas Freeman's delicious "Melton Mowbray" pies, game pies, English and American country sausages, sausage rolls and so on. We might write intermidably on this subject, but as Mr. Freeman says, "The quality speaks for itself," and for those still in the doubting class we are informed that all of the ingredients have been inspected and given full and complete approval even to the purple stamp by the Municipal Health Department.

In a fire in a room at the Astor House last evening a French attorney, M. Robert Cremieux, was rather badly burned about the face. The curtains in the room M. Cremieux was occupying caught fire, it appears, and the flames rapidly shot up to the ceiling. M. Cremieux at once jumped for his own clothing and the bed-clothes, with which he smothered the flames, but received some burns in the face, his eyes being somewhat scorched. After the fire was over a physician attended him, being with him until about midnight, when the patient's eyes were decided to be essentially uninjured. With a few days' treatment Mr. Cremieux will be all right again.

Some Chicago professors have been investigating "The non-voter." They find that most of the people who don't vote are merely indifferent; a few are disgusted; one was too humble to vote. This was a young Negro laundress, who deplored the fact that so many people voted without knowing what they were doing. The investigators do not recommend compulsory voting. It has been remarked by some English critics that, if we are to have compulsion, we should at least be entitled to vote against every one of the candidates.

SHANTUNG BANK REOPENED AFTER CHIHLI DEPARTS

Firms At Chefoo Are Taxed To Cover Payments Made To Wu Pei-fu

(Reuter's Pucida Service)

Chefoo, Nov. 15.—Shantung Province having declared its independence, the Tsi Tung Industrial Bank which was closed some weeks ago on the instructions of Marshal Wu Pei-fu has now been permitted to reopen. The Bank had been closed in view of the fact that General Lu Yung-hsiang is a shareholder and money was alleged to have been transferred to him from the Chefoo branch.

A considerable amount had to be expended here on coal and supplies for Marshal Wu's fleet and $60,000 in cash is said to have been handed over to him also.

This has necessitated a substantial tax on local Chinese firms in order that the amount expended, which is altogether estimated at $140,000, may be refunded to the Chamber of Commerce. Local Chinese firms are therefore being taxed for sums ranging from $20 to $2,000.

Ten thousand dollars of the total raised is to be handed over to the Police Department for paying police wages and a further $10,000 is to be used for the consolidation of the Chefoo Volunteer Corps.

This organisation which has recently been established is proving most successful. Over five hundred recruits are being drilled each week. Uniforms for them have already been purchased.

Hotels Are Granted Permits For Buses

Permission has been granted the Hongkong and Shanghai Hotels Company by the Municipal Council to operate the two Thornycroft motor buses which the company recently put into service here in a service arranged for the convenience of guests at the hotels. In granting this permission, it was stipulated that no passengers other than bona fide guests of the hotels were to be carried in the buses; that passengers be allowed to enter the buses only at definite termini and not en route; that no money be collected on the buses from passengers; that no unmetalled roads be used without permission first being obtained, and that a quarterly license fee of Tls. 75 per bus be paid.

The new buses are intended principally for an interhotel service.

HUSBAND'S INDIGESTION WIFE'S ANAEMIA

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Again Prove Their Value As A Family Remedy.

The right way to build up a weak stomach is through the blood. Anaemia is proverty of blood and requires tonic treatment. There is nothing remarkable, therefore, in the fact that Mr. and Mrs. Julian R. Lewis found restoration in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, the blood and nerve tonic of long-established international reputation.

Mr. Lewis, who is in the employ of Messrs. Mackwoods Ltd., Colombo, Ceylon, states:—"I was a martyr to indigestion. Those who have been similarly situated know the suffering that entails; violent stomach pains, especially after eating; dizziness, insufficient sleep, headaches, and a general lowering of vitality.

"I suffered in this way for some time, deriving only temporary relief from various medicines and prescriptions. It was through the urging of a friend that I tried Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Then almost from the first improvement was noticeable. I hardly dared hope that this would be more than temporary, but am thankful that it proved permanent. I now enjoy my meals and keep in good health.

"After my cure my wife, who suffered from anaemia, resolved to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, being much impressed by their wonderful effects in my own case. She found them equally beneficial and gained both in weight and general health."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are obtainable from chemists everywhere, or post free, @1.50 per bottle, $8 for 6 bottles, from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., 40 Kiangse Road, Shanghai.

Tientsin-Pukow Line Is Now Cut In Many Places

(China Press Correspondence)

Chuchow, Anhwei, Nov. 15.—Some idea of the more or less tense situation which has developed between Kiangsu and Anhwei Provinces since Anhwei announced its independence from Marshal Chi Hsieh-yuan of Kiangsu is indicated by the stationing of troops along the Tientsin-Pukow Railway north of Pukow and the cutting of the line in several places, apparently by both sides.

Yesterday I made the trip from Pukow to Chuchow, Anhwei keeping to the railroad for the entire journey. I left Pukow and walked to Wu-i, and although I passed many soldiers along the way I was not questioned or asked to show a passport at any point. It was rather amusing to see how easy it was to pass through the lines first of the Kiangsu soldiers and then of the Anhwei soldiers. At Wu-i I was fortunate enough to secure passage on a military train, consisting of one third class coach and an engine, for the balance of the journey to Chuchow.

The Pukow station is the most deserted looking place I have seen for a long while. I did not see one first class, second class or third class coach anywhere at the station or about the yards. There were a few goods cars and about half a dozen engines but otherwise the yards were bare. Half way to Tung Ko an engine with one third class coach coming from Pukow passed me going north. It was crowded with soldiers.

SENTRIES ARE LAX

I found one ying of Kiangsu troops camped at Hwa Chi Ying. Their tents were pitched a little to the right of the station toward the north and a number of sentries were posted on the railroad but they did not even bother to question me when I passed. At Tung Ko there were two ying of Kiangsu soldiers camped at the left of the station. Their tents were pitched within a stone's throw of the station.

About three hundred yards beyond the station the spikes had been removed for a distance of thirty yards and the rails were disconnected. The rails were still in place on the ties with bolts, plates and nuts all handy so that half an hour would have been sufficient to place everything in shape for trains to pass. Sentries were posted on the track but paid no attention to me.

Five li to the south of Wu-i another section or two of the rails were displaced but here again everything was at hand so that the line could be put in shape in short order. About one li south of Wu-i I found about four sections of rails removed entirely. The ties were still in place but although I looked around carefully I could find no trace of rails, plates, bolts or nuts.

ANHWEI SOLDIERS

At Wu-i I found plenty of Anhwei soldiers. There was a big camp with military tents about a li to the right of the station on an open space near the river. Numbers of troops were also located in the houses built for the foreign construction staff on Hong Shan, about one mile south of Wu-i. It is reported that there is one Lu of soldiers at Wu-i but from my observations it would seem more probable that there is only one tuan, about 1,500 men.

Report has it that there is one ying of Anhwei troops guarding the border of Anhwei at Shui-kow, which is on the old water route from Pukow to Chuchow. There are three ying of foot soldiers in Chuchow. One pai (forty-two men) of artillery with four guns is encamped at the Chuchow station.

One mail train with a mixture of coaches is running between Chuchow and Hsuchowfu but there is no fixed schedule. No one seems to know what to expect, but the opinion is beginning to prevail that there will be no fighting along this section of the railroad.

"Health Better than it has been for Years."

Our portrait is of Mrs. WOODROW, of 58, Robinson Road, Tooting, London, England, whose husband writes:

"My wife has suffered very badly for the past four or five years with Piles, being unable to sleep at night or get any relief during the day. She tried several advertised remedies, none of which did her any good. Some three weeks ago she thought she would try 'Clarke's Blood Mixture,' and before she had taken half a bottle she was better, and by the time she had finished the second bottle she was quite cured. She can now sleep well, eat well, and get about her work, and her general health is better than it has been for years." In a further letter some eight months later Mr. Woodrow writes: "I am pleased to say that since my wife's cure of Piles in September, 1913, there has been no sign of return of the trouble."

CLARKE'S BLOOD MIXTURE, by reason of its remarkable blood purifying properties, can be relied upon to give speedy relief and lasting cure in cases of Eczema, Bad Legs, Abscesses, Ulcers, Boils, Pimples, Eruptions, Piles, Glandular Swellings, Rheumatism, Sciatica, Gout. Pleasant to take and free from anything injurious. Of all Dealers. Ask for and see you get

Something new in Comedy Pictures

Hilariously funny, pulsating with thrills—the love force working in Caveman, Ancient Roman and Modern American.

With this, his first full length feature film—6 reels—Buster Keaton sets a new standard in comedy production. Monumental in its bigness, eye-filling in its grandeur and beauty. The Roman Colosseum, where the sensational chariot race is run, is the largest exterior ever constructed for a picture—with 1,000 people in the scene. And Margaret Leahy, England's foremost beauty—so adjudged among 80,000 contestants—is in the cast.

SOUP KITCHEN FOR REFUGEES TO BE CLOSED

Mr. Lockyer, Treasurer, Issues Financial Report

The Russian Relief Advisory Committee, through its honorary treasurer, A. E. Lockyer, announces that the soup kitchen which it has been conducting for some time past will be discontinued on March 31 next, and repatriation work will cease.

Mr. Lockyer's report follows:

I take this opportunity of thanking all those who have so generously come to our assistance from time to time thus enabling us to successfully run the soup kitchen since July, 1923. As the difficulties of repatriation are increasing instead of diminishing and as we cannot get any official help despite our utmost endeavors, we feel that this problem has got beyond the scope of a charity organisation like ours. Owing to the war and to political troubles in Manchuria even Hailar has been closed as an outlet for our refugees and after mature consideration my Committee has unanimously decided to stop all repatriation work. We feel that if we can keep the kitchen going until the end of March, thus feeding refugees over another winter that official steps should then be taken to deal with the problem which after all is one affecting the whole community and cannot be carried on indefinitely by charity contributions controlled by private organisations.

Bombs Are Thrown At Sirdar At Cairo

(Reuter's Service)

Cairo, Nov. 19.—An attempt was made this afternoon to assassinate the Sirdar, Major-General Sir Lee Stack. Two bombs were thrown at him when he was driving from the Ministry of War. One of the bombs exploded but Sir Lee Stack was not inured.

Dean Of Washington Correspondents Dies

(BY UNITED PRESS)

Washington, Nov. 18.—Gustav Karger, dean of newspaper correspondents at the capital, died here today following an operation.

Gustav Karger was born in Berlin, Germany, July 12, 1866, and went to the United States with his parents at the age of seven. He was educated in the public schools of Cleveland and Columbus, Ohio, and later began the study of law. He abandoned the legal profession early in life, however, in order to take up newspaper work, first as a reporter on the Cincinnati Freie Presse and later as reporter, and city editor on the Cincinnati Commercial-Gazette and the Cincinnati Post. In 1899, he went to Washington as correspondent for the Scripps-McRae newspapers. Since 1906 he had been Washington correspondent for the Cincinnati Times-Star.

Mr. Karger was chairman of the standing committee of correspondents in charge of the congressional press galleries and in many other ways was given precedence as leader of the group of correspondents at Washington. He was active in Republican politics, and served as personal press representative of President William Howard Taft in the campaign of 1908. He had attended and reported all of the national political conventions since 1892.

"Water War" Still On At Los Angeles; Ranchers Stand Pat

(Reuter's American Service)

Lone Pines, Calif., Nov. 18.—Hordes of ranchers accompanied by their families, all of whom were armed, camped last night at the Alabama gate of the Los Angeles aqueduct, vowing to continue to spill water until the authorities settle the "water war." The men defied the Sheriff's order, declaring that nobody except the militia could force them to withdraw. The ranchers claim that when the aqueduct was built it was agreed that they should get 40 percent of the water for irrigation purposes whereas they got nothing and suffered great damage.

Advance Notice of a Theatrical Performance

Leading Chinese Actors All Taking Part

As five or six districts have suffered devastations from the war in the southeast, relief measures or the succour of several hundred thousands of people in distress are being undertaken. The most pressing matter is to feed and clothe such a vast multitude. We have raised $7,000 with which we bought 3,000 suits of cotton wadded garments which have been distributed in the affected districts through the Masons' and Carpenters' Guild. In view of the extensive areas needing help, this small relief is like a drop of water in an ocean. We have, therefore, obtained the promise to stage a Chinese Play from leading actors of nine companies who will give their service gratis, so that all receipts will be devoted to relief purposes. We, the promoters, will each contribute $500 and supporters each $100 in order to start arrangements. Another announcement will be made when arrangements are completed. All persons who will join us will be welcomed.

SOVIET BANKER VISITS U. S. ON TRADE MISSION

V. S. Korobkoff To Discuss Russ Relations With Financiers

New York, Oct. 12.—Closer banking connections between the Soviet and American financial institutions, with the object of building up both fiduciary and trade relations between unrecognised Russia and the United States, is the purpose of the visit here of Vitally S. Korobkoff, director of the central bank of Soviet Russia, known as the Bank of Foreign Trade or Russian Commercial Bank.

In an interview yesterday at the offices of the Amtorg Trading Corporation, 136 Liberty Street, where the Soviet bank official has been making his headquarters since his arrival on the Berengaria last Friday, Mr. Korobkoff, who was an officer of the St. Petersburg International Bank before the revolution, told through an interpreter of his purpose in coming to America and discussed the financial progress of Russia.

During his stay in this country he will come in personal touch with a number of leading American banking institutions to discuss prospects offered by the development of trade relations with Russia, and especially in connection with the business of the Amtorg Trading Corporation, the All-Russian Textile Syndicate and other organisations carrying on trade with Russia. One of his purposes is to arrange for the more efficient organisation of the forwarding of money remittances through the bank which he is representing.

Mr. Korobkoff said that, owing to the growing financial stability of the Soviet republics, the preliminary plans of the Government for the budget of 1924-25 showed that it would be balanced with a probable deficit of only 80,000,000 gold rubles. The whole budget is 2,000,000,000 gold rubles. This deficit, Mr. Korobkoff says, will be covered by the issue of small coin, for which there is said to be a great demand in Russia. The deficit, he states, is in the face of a favorable trade balance for Russia in the first six months of this year of 66,600,000 rubles, the exports from Russia having amounted in this period to 150,500,000 rubles, and the imports to 83,900,000 rubles.

Mr. Korobkoff set forth present-day Russia's banking situation. The Commercial Bank, of which he is the director, began its operations in December, 1922, with a capital of 10,000,000 gold rubles (about $5,000,000). Upon its reorganisation in April, 1924, it doubled its capital and its chief stockholders became the leading Russian commercial organisations engaged in foreign trade, such as the Commissariat of Foreign Trade, the Exportkhleb and similar organisations. At present the bank is contemplating a new issue of stock amounting to 20,000,000 rubles, bringing the paid-up capital to 40,000,000 rubles. On Sept. 15 the working capital of the bank amounted to 41,950,000 rubles.

The bank, Mr. Korobkoff said, centred its attention on the financing of foreign trade to such an extent that during the three months ended Aug. 31 the credits for this trade amounted to 85 percent of all its credit transactions.

The bank is also extending its operations through the organisation of new branches in cities of the Soviet Union which are strategically situated for foreign trade, as Odessa, Kharkov, Batoum. In the East the bank is working through the Russo-Persian Bank and the Far Eastern Bank, of which it holds considerable stock.

The Soviet banking system begins with the State Bank, which is a bank of issue and which serves a purpose somewhat similar to that of the Federal Reserve banks in America in the discounting of commercial bank bills, &c. It serves the other large banks, such as the Prombank or the Industrial Bank, which in turn serves the needs of the industries; the Vsekobank or the All-Russian Co-operative Bank, which is engaged primarily in financing the co-operatives; the Agricultural Bank and the Russian Commercial Bank or Bank for Foreign Trade of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics.

Mr. Korobkoff said that the banks of Russia had contributed considerably to the process of agriculture and industrial recovery. The financial strength of Soviet Russia, he asserted, had been demonstrated by the monetary reforms and currency stabilisation, which he characterised as the greatest economic achievement of the country during the year. He admitted that the currency situation was far behind what it was before the war, but said the monetary reforms had been achieved without any marked disturbance.

Largest Diesel Plant In The World Installed By French Tramway Company

View of Third Unit of Diesel Installation of the French Tramway Central Station (in course of erection).

Third Unit Of French Installation At Lokawei Formally Inaugurated Before Brilliant Assembly

By Geo. W. Missemer

The third unit of what will be (and probably is already) the largest Diesel engine installation in the world was formally put into operation at the station of the French Tramway Company at Lokawei, French Concession, yesterday afternoon. The affair was witnessed by a large body of prominent residents. Refreshments were served by Marcels.

Among those present were M. Wilden, French Consul General, M. Van Haute, Belgian Consul General, Messrs LeBris, Fano, Schwyzer, Sheridan, Tartois, Speelman, and Chapeaux of the French Municipality, M. Fiore, Chief of French Police, M. Fredet, head of the French Chamber of Commerce, M. Ardaln, manager of the Banque de l'Indo-Chine, M. Borelangue of the Banque Industrielle, M. Straetmans of the Banque Belge pour l'Etranger, Pere Sallier and other representatives of the French Fathers, Mr. Meister, representing the Sulzer works at Winterthur, Mr. C. S. Taylor of the Shanghai Trams, Mr. F. B. Pitcairn of the Shanghai Waterworks, Mr. Lo Ba hung of the Chinese Trams and many others.

ADDRESS BY M. MONSERAN

The guests were received by M. Monseran, the director of the French Tramways, who addressed the assembled guests in French in the following sense: "You are invited today to witness the setting into motion of the third unit at the new Central Station of which the first two were formally opened in December, 1922, and I thank you for having abandoned your own affairs for a short while in order that you might witness what our company has accomplished during the past two years.

"I thank you, particularly Mr. Consul General, for having favored us with your presence despite the fact that you must be exceedingly busy with other matters on the eve of your departure from Shanghai.

"The two units first assembled have a force of 3,000 horse power. The one set in motion to-day has a force as one unit of 3,600 horse power. Thus the capacity of our station has been doubled at one "shot" and is more than we have need of just at the moment. Even though our old central station supplied by steam engines were out of service, and even if the assistance which our English friends give us were to fail, we would still have a reserve of fifty percent above the maximum consumption which has ever been attained. Thus, thanks to the reliable service of the Diesel motors the Council may be quite assured that the wants of the Concession will be amply supplied.

IMPROVING THE TRAM SERVICE

"With this reserve of supply we are immediately making improvements in the tram service. When the new tramcars which have been ordered in France arrive next Spring, with the aid of the transformer sub-station which has been installed at the same time as this third Diesel, a still more regular and effective service will be inaugurated.

"But we are not yet satisfied. We know that the French Concession will grow like an enormous mushroom, developing with extreme rapidity, and we must always provide for the future needs of the community which we are serving. We have made good progress during the past two years, but we know we must continue further on the way and still therefore we have ordered another unit identical with the one installed to-day, and Mr. Consul General, if you do not stay away from Shanghai too long, I think I can assure you that in less than a year you will have the pleasure of being present also at its inauguration. We have also planned still further extensions."

M. WILDEN ON CATS AND DOGS

Responding to the toast, M. Wilden humorously remarked that M. Monseran of the French Trams had accomplished quite a big task in installing this large Diesel engine, still it was not so difficult to manage such a product of science as it was to manage a woman. Speaking of women, brought up the subject of love. There had some time back not been much love between the Municipality and the French Tramways, in fact it was rather a cat and dog life, but relations were now very cordial, and if one said that they were still like cats and dogs they were good friends just like the cat and the dog he had over at the Consulate.

TASTY DECORATIONS

The station itself and the huge engine were tastily decorated with bunting, and when the lever which put the current from the exciter into operation was turned over the machinery silently and rapidly came into operation, engine which was built by Sulzer Brothers, of Winterthur, Switzerland, is on the two-cycle principle, has six cyclinders, and develops 3,600 brake horse power at 125 revolutions per minute. The electrical machinery directly coupled to the engine, is from the Creusot works of the French firm Schneider. The previous two electrical installations were from the Swiss Oerlikon Co.

The installation of Diesels in the French concession is being watched with great interest by the entire local engineering profession. One of the principal reasons why the French Tramways decided to install Diesels was that there was not available a sufficient supply of water for condensing purposes such as would be required if a steam outfit, no matter of what type, had been installed. It is also confidently expected that the Diesel installation will on the whole work out cheaper than even the most modern coal consuming plant, although exact results can only be compared in time when the matter of relative depreciation of the two kinds of installations will have had an opportunity to show itself in actual practice.

The illustration presented herewith is from a photograph taken before the largest of the three engines (the one formally started to-day) had been completely erected.

U. S. Railways Place Heavy Orders For Equipment

New York, Oct. 16.—Numerous orders involving large amounts of railroad equipment and including cars, locomotives and rails, were announced yesterday by several of the leading carriers. The most important order of this character was that of the New York Central, which included 184,650 tons of rails, 15 locomotives and 500 cars, placed with various manufacturing concerns. The Texas & Pacific and the Great Northern also were buyers of new equipment as well as the Texas Company, which came into the market for tank cars.

Three big steel companies were the recipients of the New York Central's rail order. The United States Steel Corporation was given 87,600 tons, the Bethlehem Steel Corporation 80,200 tons and the Inland Steel Company 16,850 tons. The Steel Corporation's share of the business was divided between the Illinois Steel Company and the Carnegie Steel Company, which will handle 70,600 tons and 17,000 tons, respectively. This distribution, it was announced, is of a tentative nature, not to be made final within twenty-four hours. It is not expected, however, that there will be any material change in the figures as announced yesterday.

The American Locomotive Company was given an order by the New York Central for fifteen locomotives. Ten of these will be of the Pacific type, weighing 306,000 pounds, and the remaining five, also of the Pacific type, will weigh 296,000 pounds. The cars ordered by the New York Central numbered 500, all box cars, the award going to the Standard Steel Car Company.

The Texas & Pacific Railway Company placed order for 1,000 box cars with the American Car and Foundry Company and for another 1,000 cars of a similar type with the Pullman Company.

The Great Northern Railway Company has placed an order with the Bethlehem Steel Corporation for 500 ore cars and is now inquiring for 900 automobile cars, the order for which will probably be placed within a few days.

The Texas Company, one of the largest independent oil producing companies, has asked equipment manufacturers to submit bids on three individual lots of 10,000-gallon tank cars. The first lot is for 500 cars, the second for 800 cars and the third for 1,000 cars. It is not anticipated that the contract will involve more than 1,000 cars, the method of asking for the bids being adopted to insure the lowest possible price.

In the last two months something like 200,000 tons of steel material has been placed in the Chicago district for cars that are being built at the plants of the Western car manufacturers.

HARRIMAN PAYS 38 MILLION FOR RUSS CONCESSION

Moscow, Oct. 14.—The final details of the contract between the Soviet government and American interests, represented by W. A. Harriman & Co., of New York, covering exploitation of the Georgian manganese fields, have been agreed on.

The Americans agree to pay the Soviet a royalty of $3 a ton up to the time they construct a railroad, harbor, mines and improvements, after which the government will receive $4. The concession runs for twenty years. The Americans are to ship a total of 2,750,000 tons during the first five years, the shipments increasing on a sliding scale over five-year periods.

The contract involves no preliminary payment, but if the present terms are fulfilled the Soviet government will ultimately receive from the Americans about $38,000,000. The Americans get the right to employ local Russian labor on their own terms and to bring in machinery and the necessary equipment free of duty.

This is the largest and most important concession granted since the revolution. Tremendous political pressure was brought to bear through British, German and other sources to induce the Soviet to reconsider its decision, but the Americans won by dint of clever negotiating, more favorable financial terms and superior technical equipment.

The German interests in attempting to block the award to the Americans alleged that it was unfair in lieu of the fact that Germans had constituted 20 percent of the mine operators in the Chiatouri district of Georgia before the revolution. They cited the United States' non-recognition of the present Russian regime and also alleged that an American contract would deprive the German steel factories in the Ruhr of an adequate supply of manganese and would hamper fulfillment of the Dawes reparation program.

The Harriman representatives pledged that they would not only compensate the former German and Russian owners for their previous holdings, but would give them participation in the profits of the enterprise and assure all foreign ocuntries an ample supply of manganese on equal terms.

New York City Wants More Rapid Transit Facilities

New York, Oct. 17.—Albert J. County, vice-president and director of both the Pennsylvania and Long Island Railroad companies, lifted his voice in protest yesterday at the inadequate rapid transit facilities in New York City. Mr. County was testifying at the resumption of the hearing before the Transit Commission on the application of the Pennsylvania for a $1,000,000 increase in the rental of the Long Island for its use of the Pennsylvania Station.

"The whole rapid transit situation in New York is intolerable and inadequate," he said. "Steps have never been taken to afford proper relief. The only manner in which adequate relief can be given so as to serve the entire metropolitan area is by the construction of bridges across the Hudson River to take care of the great crowds of New Jersey commuters. Attempting to cure three-fourths of the disease is not enough. The whole body must be cured."

Mr. County particularly called attention to the urgent need of one or more four-track subway lines from Queens and Brooklyn into Manhattan and to the West Side, that would connect with all north and south-bound transit lines. He asserted that the Long Island and the Pennsylvania were not anxious to handle so much of the traffic and that the construction of new subway lines would be a great relief to both companies, as well as a boon to the public.

Discussing the proposed increase in long Island rental, Mr. County said the time had come when the Long Island and all other subsidiaries of the Pennsylvania must stand on their own feet and not expect unnecessary concessions from the larger company.

He declared that the proposed increase in rental to the Long Island Railroad would permit the enlargement of facilities at the Pennsylvania Station which had been long demanded by Long Island commuters. It would enable the Long Island to handle 2 percent more passengers from the Pennsylvania terminal.

World Outlook Better In British Foreign Trade

The improved condition of world markets has been reflected in the increased trade of Great Britain during the first six months of 1924 in comparison with the same period in 1923 with substantial gains noted in imports, exports and re-exports, according to the European division of the Department of Commerce. Food, drink, and tobacco imports were £8,400,000 greater, despite the falling off in the imports of meat and tobacco. Imports of raw materials for manufacture increased £36,900,000, largely due to a £21,000,000 gain in cotton and £11,700,000 gain in wool. Hides and skins and non-ferrous metal imports made slight gains, while small decreases were noted in paper-making material and rubber. Imports of manufactured articles increased £13,600,005, the greatest increase being in iron and steel, non-ferrous metals, woolens and worsteds, and silk. The total imports were £59,600,000 greater during the first half of this year than last.

The export trade of British products was not as steady as the import trade. Exports of food, drink and tobacco, increased £5,300,000, with grain and flour leading. Exports of raw materials decreased £11,900,000, chiefly due to a drop of £12,400,000 in coal. The high figure for 1923 was due to increased demand following the occupation of the Ruhr. Exports of manufacturing articles increased £11,700,000, despite a decrease of £9,200,000 in machinery and vehicles. The latter was offset by an increase of £9,600,000 in cotton exports and £1,500,000 in woolen exports. Slight increases were shown in exports of iron and steel, apparel, oils and fats. The total exports were greater by £5,800,000 during the first six months of this year than during the same period of last year.

Tendency for Great Britain to receive more imports from the colonies and possessions is apparent from available statistics. For the first six months of 1923, 69 percent of the imports were received from foreign countries and 31 percent from the Empire. For 1924 the percentage had dropped to 68.5 percent from foreign countries, leaving 31.5 percent from the Empire. Among the foreign countries, the United States easily led the increases with over £9,000,000.

All Want The Arsenal Removed But It's Still Here!

GENERAL Kung Pang-tu, newly appointed Occupation Commissioner at Shanghai, in an interview in The China Press this week declared himself in favor of the removal of the Lunghwa Arsenal and the abolition of the office of Defense Commissioner in this district.

Although we have not kept a careful record of the pronouncements of Chinese officials on this subject, we are reminded of a statement once made by a prominent American politician that "poitical platforms are made to get into office on, but not to be lived up to after election." This statement might be applied very well to the conflicting and changing viewpoints of officialdom in this part of China in respect to this subject.

First there was the interview with Marshal Chi Hsieh-yuan published in The China Press practically a year ago demanding that the Shanghai arsenals and powder factory be removed and the office of defense commissioner be abolished and all troops be removed from this commercial and industrial district. When Marshal Chi made this statement Shanghai was not under his control: it was at that time controlled by General Lu Yung-hsiang of Hangchow and his associate, General Ho Feng-lin of Shanghai. Neither of these two last named gentlemen, since they were in control of the arsenal and district, wanted it dismantled or removed—for obvious reasons.

Then the civil war came on between Kiangsu and Chekiang and after many days of serious fighting, Marshal Chi and his associates were victorious and Generals Lu and Ho fled to Japan. Immediately The China Press sent a reporter to interview Marshal Chi at his headquarters at the village of Chenju near the outskirts of Shanghai. Marshal Chi who then was in control of Shanghai, was not so outspoken on the subject of the removal of the military establishment at Shanghai as he had been previously and said in effect that "this was a matter which would have to be settled by the Central Government." There was more to similar effect but it was plain to be seen that he was not so enthusiastic on the subject of the removal as he had been a few months previously when the arsenal was under the control of Generals Lu and Ho.

Now we have another chapter in the history of the arsenal and the Shanghai military establishment: Owing to the curious mix-up brought about here by the actions of General Feng Yu-hsiang at Peking and the ensuing defeat of the Chihli military party, the actual control of the Shanghai arsenal is now in the hands of Gen. Chang Yung-ming, a Hupeh commander who was the first of Marshal Chi's lieutenants to get through the lines after the collapse of Chekiang and acting on the old principle of "finders are keepers" established himself at Lunghwa. Later on after the new faction had gotten control of the Peking Government, there came a mandate appointing General Chang defense commissioner here. He is supposed to be receiving the support of Marshal Sun Chuan-fang of Chekiang and Fukien provinces, but whether this is correct or not, it is known that the arsenal is now being operated to full capacity on munition orders for Marshal Sun at Hangchow.

Therefore our reporter next made the sixteen hour journey to the Chekiang provincial capital to find out the views of Marshal Sun on this question. Marshal Sun as quoted recently in these columns of The China Press expressed himself as favoring the removal of the war-making machinery from this district—"but not until he had obtained all of the munitions he needed to replenish his depleted supplies." How long this will require is not known but that the present ruler of the destinies of Chekiang and Fukien is not enthusiastic on the question may be discerned by reading his interview.

And now to make the story complete, we refer back to the opening paragraph of this discussion and the statement of General Kung Pang-tu to the effect that the arsenal and defense commissionership should be abolished. General Kung it should be stated in passing has his headquarters at the Huchow Guild and since he is supported by Marshal Chi Hsieh-yuan of Kiangsu and is opposed to the present regime in Peking, he favors the removal of the arsenal.

Thus we have a most interesting situation. Almost every one of the officials in this district has expressed himself on both sides of this question, the different viewpoints depending upon the political situation at the time. If the Chinese General Chamber of Commerce of Shanghai could manage in some way to get all of these officials into one room at the same time and present each with all of the various statements which have been made, they might see the humor of the situation and vote in favor of removing the arsenal.

The Opium Conference

THE one striking feature about the debate at Geneva on the subject of opium seems to have been rather the reluctance of the delegates to arrive at a settlement, than willingness to provide some means for putting an end to the traffic in the drug. It is for that reason, possibly, that the debate has been characterised as one of the most irrelevant that has taken place under the auspices of the League. And if we may be permitted to say so the major point seems to have been lost to sight in a maze of minutiae which seems more nearly to concern the domestic policies of the nations involved, rather than to involve the main question which must, perforce, deal with the question of international traffic in opium. The result of various crusades against opium, particularly in China, with which we are more nearly concerned, led to what virtually amounted to the extinction of the authorised importation of foreign opium in China. The result was a phenomenal increase in the price of the drug, due to economic factors of supply and demand, which was artifically assisted by the action of the Chinese government in destroying the large stocks which it bought. What was left went even higher in price than it was prior to this step, with the result that the growing of the poppy and the smuggling into China of the drug grown surreptitiously in other countries received a decided impetus, the results of which are only too apparent today.

Despite the assertions of the Chinese Minister to America Dr. Alfred Sze, and also China's Minister to Britain there is not the slightest doubt among people in the Far East that opium is being grown on an extremely large scale in China, that the traffic has not perceptibly diminished, and that if China was at any time the victim of the traffic, it is now a very enthusiastic participant. It is impossible to shut our eyes to the fact that not only is the poppy grown in violation of what is supposed to be the law of China, but that those in authority in some districts not only ignore these breaches of the law, but actually enforce them for the purpose of swelling their revenues for the maintenance of their unnecessary armies. It may be unfair to accuse the Chinese government of lack of faith in which respect, for we doubt if at any time since the disestablishment of the Manchus, the Government at Peking was ever in a position to fulfill the promises which it had made when first it sought international cooperation in the obliteration of the importation from other countries. It pays at the present moment to grow opium in China, pays to smuggle it, for the price of the imported article has risen to such an extent that the illicit article can be seized time and time again so long as a comparatively small amount eventually reaches the market. In such circumstances of what use can it be to discuss, so far as China is concerned, whether women should be admitted to opium smoking dens, or whether addicts should be registered? Surely those are matters for the domestic decisions of the governments concerned.

The solution, so far as the conference at Geneva can ever take it in present circumstances, seems to rest in the limitation of production, which should be carried on under the closest possible scrutiny, and with the highest degree of good faith between the governments concerned. To some countries that would mean the loss of considerable governmental revenue, and the diminution of a trade which brings considerable wealth to the country engaged in it. But it is considerable that if all the countries concerned acted in perfect good faith towards each other in this matter, some such arrangement might be brought about and made perfectly workable. But that cannot be so long as the laws of China are unenforceable in this respect and the only hope for a real solution to the problem is to be found, first in a solid Chinese government which, unfortunately seems just as far off today as it ever has since 1911, and a decision to enforce the law which already exists. It may be a long time before such a happy state of affairs is brought about, but so long as this country proceeds to supply for itself, what it has ceased to purchase from foreign countries, it cannot make any very valuable contribution towards the ultimate stamping out of the whole traffic.

More Truth Than Poetry

BY S. E. KISER

He started from scratch, with a commoner's chance,
Where others were anxious to beat him;
He found no smooth way over which to advance,
And many were watching to cheat him.

He saved and he hoped when his wages were small,
The favors he asked were denied him,
And he often was pressed very close to the wall
By the others who struggled beside him.

There were years when it seemed that his hoping was vain,
That he might as well drop his ambitions;
He fought a hard fight for each poor little gain,
That he won against cheerless conditions.

But he learned that each fight seemed to bring him new strength
And add to the pleasure of winning;
And others were glad to befriend him, at length,
Who had hindered him at the beginning.

When riches and power were at his command
And need had been left in the distance
No man was unwilling to lend him a hand,
Each eagerly offered assistance. . . .

The big river flows from a source that is small,
Gaining volume each mile and each hour,
And the little streams finally offer their all
To add to its breadth and its power.

Other Views Than Ours On The War In China

THE REAL CAPITAL OF CHINA

(North China Star, Tientsin)

Tientsin is today the real capital of China. Chang Tso-lin has arrived with a number of troops sufficient to defy all opposition and as far as material force goes he is in full control of the Chinese City. Tuan Chi-jui is here and the support he is receiving from all sides gives him a moral influence perhaps greater than that of any other individual in China today. Sun Yat-sen is coming from the South and his son is already here. Feng Yu-hsiang is also in Tientsin and his presence at this time would indicate that he has a fairly good understanding with Chang Tso-lin.

Nearly all the successful leaders in China's recent struggle are either in Tientsin or on their way here and political conferences are now in full swing. What is taking place here just now far outweighs anything that transpires in Peking and it is therefore no exaggeration to say that Tientsin is today the real capital of China. This city changed suddenly from being the center of military operations to become the seat of whatever actual central power that is being exercised in China today. Cabinet positions, heads of railroads and other important government administrations, are today being decided in Tientsin rather than in Peking.

The Tientsin conference may result in some real lasting benefits to China. The opportunity is surely here and it remains to be seen whether the conferees will know how to grasp it. There is really a popular demand for organisation and peaceful understandings and this creates a propitious condition not only for arriving at practical compromises but also for carrying agreements after they have once been made. Everyone is sick and tired of the so-called fighting and even the winning leaders must see that the military game is really a gamble with the odds much against the players. There is hardly a leader in Tientsin today who cannot remember from bitter experience how it feels to be on the losing side. And to all the example of Wu Pei-fu should speak volumes. Wu had apparently succeeded in getting the greater portion of China under his control when suddenly a blow in the back made him lose all and seek safety in flight. That the blow was unexpected or even rank treachery does not alter the significant fact that the power of even the seemingly most powerful Super-tuchun can be pricked like a bubble.

Militarism in China and elsewhere is really a losing game and if the present leaders in Tientsin fully realise it, they may increase their determination to attempt to accomplish something of permanent benefit to themselves, their followers and their country in the way of peace and administrative organisation. The greatest military men in history are those who use force only as a means to an end, and who after a successful campaign are able to organise or reorganise governments. At all events the eyes of China and to some extent of the world are today on Tientsin. Results are looked for and let us hope the look is not in vain.

IS FENG AN HONEST MAN OR A HYPOCRITE?

Editor, THE CHINA PRESS:

Sir.—In reading your editorial on the Christian Principles of General Feng Yu-hsiang, may I crave a small place in your paper to express my humble opinion about the moral question of the Christian General's coup d'etat? Being a common citizen, the writer hopes that he may not be mistaken for a partisan of any political party.

In deciding whether a man is an honest gentleman or a hypocrite, we should not only hear what he says, but we should carefully observe what he has done. We may call General Feng an honest Christian, if we take his circular telegram, his being a Christian, and what he said to the correspondents of both foreign and Chinese newspapers as the bases of judgment.

Now let us carefully observe what he has done when the first war between Chihli and Mukden broke out. General Feng took the side of Chihli party and played a very active part in the suicidal conflict. Had he been an honest Christian, and followed Christ's teachings of love, peace, and concord among men, he should keep his hand clean from the atrocities of war.

When he was appointed tuchun of Honan, General Pao Teh-chien was the man who welcomed him, handed him his military power, and showed good faith to him. Instead of safeguarding him the Christian General killed him secretly, when the latter was conferring in the former's headquarters. 'Love thy enemy,' is one of Christ's teachings. Granting that General Pao was General Feng's political rival, being an honest Christian, General Feng should love him; moreover, General Pao had already proved his friend; why should an honest Christian murder a faithful, innocent friend?

When Li Yuan-hung took presidency the second time, General Feng was one of those who urged him to come to Peking. After one year, he changed his mind altogether, because he wanted to support Tsao Kun to the presidency. He ordered his soldiers to besiege the White House in order to compel Li Yuan-hung to leave Peking and to hand the president's seals out. As a consequence of this, he was even described as the Hua Shing (a partisan of Tsao Chao who forced the emperor of Han Dynasty to kill the empress and two sons) of the republic by many of the Chinese newspapers. Should an honest Christian treat the Chief Executive so cruelly, simply because he wanted to raise his patron in power?

According to the reports of the newspapers, when the war between Kiangsu and Chekiang broke out, General Feng offered to send reinforcement to Kiangsu with the hope that in case Generals Lu Yung-hsiang and Ho Feng-lin were defeated, he himself might secure the tuchunship of Chekiang. He was greatly dissatisfied, when this offer did not win the approval of Tsao Kun and Wu Pei-fu. This, according to some observers, was the immediate cause of the general's present coup d'etat. If so, what he is doing is not for the welfare of the public, but for the vengeance of himself.

Now came the present incident; if the Christian General really hated the atrocities of war, he should have disuaded Tsao Kun and Wu Pei-fu with all his might. Should they not accept his advice, he might proclaim his neutrality or he might even declare war against any who first brought the country into the suicidal conflict. Seeing the unfavorable circumstances, the Chihli war lords might have changed their mind and a peace conference might then take the place of the furious bombardment.

Instead of doing this, General Feng promised Marshal Wu Pei-fu his co-operation in subjugating Chang Tso-lin. Being a Christian, he was, of course, looked upon as a gentleman and his promise was expected to be kept. Hereupon, he was entrusted with the important service of defending Jehol. When fighting in Shanhaikwan was a case of life and death, General Feng, to the surprise of both foreigners and Chinese, changed his mind the second time; instead of fighting against their common foe, he declared war against his coworkers. 'Honesty in the best policy.' No matter whether a man is a Christian or not, he should always keep his promise. It is the greatest shame and disgrace for a follower of Christ to break his word.

General Feng's compelling Tsao Kun to resign only led us to many doubts. Tsao Kun is, of course, a worthless man. We don't want him to be the Chief Executive. If General Feng thought him unfit to the capacity, why did he support him a year ago? It was he

The Higher Research

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS

Francis Gano Benedict, of the Carnegie Institution of Washington, has said something that ought to have a great number of hearers, or readers. Discoursing at a university commencement on "the research spirit in modern life," he points out, what all the other eulogists of "research," as far as I have observed, have paid no attention to, even if they ever thought of it, and that is the absence of research in other phases of life than those dealing with material developments.

"It is sorrowfully true," says he, "that with the tremendous material advancement of the world in the past fifty or sixty years, there has not been a corresponding development of the intellectual powers with regard to the higher things of life.

"In spite of the decades, indeed centuries, of the ever-present example of the noblest in art, there has not been a second Praxiteles. Today we have no Rembrandts, Raphaels, or Vermeers, and there is no modern Shakespeare.

"We have no more 'Ninth' symphonies, or 'Unfinished' symphonies, and that tinkling tune, 'Yes, We Have No Bananas,' will not make up for their loss, although the entertainment of those who enjoy that type of so-called music may be, and unfortunately only too frequently is, fully satisfactory.

"It is perhaps surprising that with our increased knowledge of resonance, and the elasticity of metals and woods, there is still no substitute for the Stradivarius violin, though we have been inflicted with the saxophone.

"Here we have immediately great research problem upon which we may study and reflect, and should act, as to why our esthetic, musical, artistic and spiritual life is not more progressive."

What Dr. Benedict says is excellent. It ought to have been said, and insisted upon, many times before. Physical science has been enabled to claim almost exclusive credit for the spirit of research, while the work has been exploited on such narrowly material lines that many who aspire toward higher things than money getting, profit grabbing and unspiritual living, have taken a distaste to the word "research" itself, continually dinned into the ears, as it is, in connection with the advancement of purely material interests and achievements, which, however great and wonderful they are, do not, after all, represent what we believe to be the best that is in human nature.

Our great industrial establishments offer irresistible inducements to men who have shown in the universities their capacity for original research in science, and out of their search for new things that will "pay," occasionally emerge brilliant discoveries whose profit is only for science itself. But it is physical science only. Where is there an establishment that will offer similar inducements to men who show a capacity to advance music, painting, sculpture, literature, or any other of the higher arts which truly adorn humanity? I fear that Dr. Benedict is only too right in suggesting that, in these things, we are allowing the world to go backward.

Only a few days before this writing I met in France, a young Greek, a refugee from the horrors of Smyrna, who, full of pride in the ancient and matchless renown of his country, could not talk enough of the great expectations that he entertained of the appreciative welcome that would be accorded in America to a masterpiece from the hand of Praxiteles, lent to that new, wonderful world in the west, to inspire it with the desire and the power to outdo the artistic triumphs of Hellenic genius. I enjoyed his talk, but I feared that the spirit of prophecy was not in it.

Correspondence

who helped Tsao Kun in raising his power and rank; it was also he who humbled Tsao Kun from his power and rank. Was an honest Christian so double-faced?

The chief aim of the coup d'etat is to save China from her civil wars, as General Feng puts it. So far as the present circumstances are concerned, there may be more civil wars than otherwise be the case. Seven provinces of the Yangtse valley has already formed allies. They are, more or less, under the influence of Marshal Wu Pei-fu. Can General Feng bring them to terms by peaceful means? I doubt if Chang Tso-lin and Tuan Chi-jui are both of different factions with General Feng. It is problematical that they can get along peacefully in co-operation. According to General Feng's telegram, the leaders of Kwomingtang are also invited to the so-called National Conference. We doubt if the conference can have a fruitful result with men whose political attitudes are entirely different from one another. Any unfavorable outcome will lead to a civil war. With General Feng's coup d'etat, the atrocities of war is by no means at an end, and, on the contrary, the dangers of future China are inevitable and indescribable.

In a word, if General Feng's deeds are in accordance with his words, he may be, rightly, called an honest Christian. Unfortunately, he proves, by what he has done, the Juda, Pharisee and troublemaker of China.

Thanking you for your valuable space, Yours very sincerely,

A CHINESE CITIZEN.

Plaid Is Used for Clever Trimming On Smart New Clothes

The French are especially successful in making use of Scotch plaids, most of all because they do not hesitate to depart entirely from the Scotch tradition in the matter. Generations of well-bred English women have dressed their young sons and daughters, occasionally, in plaids, using those plaids in the thoroughly traditonal Scotch manner—as kilts.

Now all this has been changed. Plaids have been used abundantly and lavishly in the making of little girls' clothes—but seldom is there an attempt at the kilt. To many folk the stalwart men of Scotland are so in spite of—not because of—their daily diet of oatmeal and the pleated kilt. But a little authentic plaid used by way of decoration on a frock of French or clever American designing is another matter.

Plaids are use to make what the French call "garnitures charmantes"—charming garnishings. One very interesting little French traveling frock is of navy blue cloth, with a wide scant hem of blue and green plaid applied diagonally, and some of the same plaid is used to form the rever at the back of the collar. Another bit of the same plaid forms a band on the felt hat. Jenny uses plaid in combination with beige—the plaid then being done in browns. One striking long coat from this house shows a waistcoat of plaid that extends from the top of the high collar to the end of the coat in the front.

The position of plaid in the world of sports no longer needs to be questioned. Twenty years ago when women went to play golf wearing enormous golf skirts with more enormous and more unwieldly capes, they considered Scotch plaids most appropriate for this game that had its birth in Scotland. The skirts and capes were made of material showing a Scotch plaid on the wrong side.

Now again plaid makes its appearance on the golf links. One of the best known sports goods concerns in this country shows a sport frock of beige cloth with hem and small turn-down collar of the plaid. This is the type of frock that real sportswomen choose for golf and other outdoor activities on crisp autumn days.

Beige sport frock trimmed smartly with plaid.

dren attend does not have a uniform, it may be a very good plan to adopt a sort of uniform for your own children. You will find that smartness of appearance and real neatness can thus be achieved far more easily than is the case where the boy or girl has a half dozen different sorts of school get-up. The young boy has succeeded so well in the large number of high-class boarding schools where it has been adopted is because the girls themselves like it. Granted that the frocks chosen for the uniform are not dowdy, there is nothing repellent in having to dress the same day after day. And there are distinct advantages to be gained.

Even if the school your children may be dressed always in sailor suits, the young girl may be dressed in pleated skirts and middy blouse, or in one-piece blue serge frocks with detachable, washable collars and cuffs. Or you may find it more desirable to dress her in separate skirts mounted on a bodice, with knitted jumpers, worn with washable collars and cuffs. You may even be able to use home-knitted jumpers. You will usually find that any girl or boy who is distinctly well and appropriately dressed in school generally does dress almost always the same way.

One rule that is made in many of the better-class private schools is that no valuable jewelry may be worn in classroom, and that no jewelry other than one single ring and one pin can be worn. This is a good rule for any mother to make regarding the jewelry worn by her own daughters. Moreover, while bobbed hair is no longer questioned, elaborate combs and clasps are not allowed in school hours. And there really ought to be a rule in every girls' school against the use of little pocket combs. Yet some girls wear these boh combs around their neck on a ribbon, using them whenever they happen to think their hair needs a little attention, in chapel, or in the middle of recitation.

"ASPHALION," HOLT LINER, LAUNCHED

Fast Geared Turbine Steamer Built At Greenock For Liverpool Firm

Scotts' Shipbuilding and Engineering Company, Greenock, have launched the geared turbine steamer Asphalion, which they have built for Messrs. Alfred Holt and Co., of Liverpool.

The vessel, which is of the well-deck type, with poop, long centrecastle and forecastle, is 425ft. in lenght, 54ft. 6in. in breadth, and 32ft. 9in. in depth. The cargohandling equipment includes 16 steam winches, while about 111,000 cubic yards of the hold and tween deck space is insulated for the carriage of special cargoes.

SINGLE PROPELLER

The propelling machinery consists of one set of Brown-Curtis turbines driving a single propeller through double-reduction gearing of the three-box type, developing 3,700 s.h.p. on ordinary service with the propeller running at 78 r.p.m., the corresponding speeds of high pressure and low pressure turbines being 3,420 and 2,600 r.p.m. respectively.

Astern turbines are incorporated in the exhaust ends of the high pressure and low pressure turbines. Steam is supplied by two double-ended Scotch boilers, each 16ft. 3in. in diameter and 19ft. in length, arranged for coal firing, generating steam at a pressure of 220 lb. per square inch, superheated through 200 degs. F. in superheaters of the smoke-tube type.

ECONOMIC PLANT

In the uptakes four Howden-Ljungstrom air preheaters are arranged, and these will utilise the heat in the flue gases to the best advantage. The improved boiler efficiency resulting from this and the favorable combination of turbine and propeller speeds will, it is expected, effect considerable economy in the working of the plant.

ELECTRIC POWER SEEN AS KEY TO REAL PROSPERITY

New York, Oct. 19.—"Human intelligence today knows of no better means for increasing the prosperity of the American nation and the American people than a continuation of electrical development along our present lines," according to Brigadier General Guy E. Tripp, chairman of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company. "When something better does appear" he said, "it will be our duty to work for it, even at personal cost to ourselves, but in the mean time we appear to be on the right track."

General Tripp based his opinion as to the relation of prosperity and electrical development on a study of wages and power per workman throughout the world. Thus, the wages of the average American workman is about two and a quarter times the wages of the average British workman, but the American has over twice the mechanical power at his disposal. This same proportion of wages to power per capita holds throughout the world.

Present plans of the electrical industry, said General Tripp, call for the development of large superpower systems which will supply the maximum amount of electric power to the largest number of people at the lowest cost. Hence it seems probable that maximum prosperity will result from this development.

These views are corroborated, General Tripp pointed out, by the findings of a British committee of engineers and men in public life under the chairmanship of Lloyd George, which has been studying means for solving some of Great Britain's economic problems and especially her serious unemployment situation. "This committee recommends," said General Tripp, "that Great Britain begin at once the development of a nation-wide electrical system, based on plans similar to those we are following in the United States, and states as its confident belief that such a development will bring about revolutionary improvements in the affairs of both the British nation and the British people as individuals."

"There is a real surprise in the Lloyd George report," continued the General, "and that is its recommendations as regards government ownership of the proposed national electric system. Great Britain has always been regarded in this country as an enthusiastic proponent of government ownership of the electrical utilities. Sixty-five percent of her total installed capacity of public service electric generators and 66 percent of her electric railway mileage are municipally owned.

"One would expect the Lloyd George committee to take for granted government ownership and operation of the great electrical system it has recommended; but, on the contrary, it condemns government operation in the strongest language it can use with propriety."

Several passages quoted by the General from the report are as follows:

"Experience is overwhelmingly against the successful administration of a business enterprise by a bureaucracy."

"Our present proposals to develop a nation-wide electrical system place the whole executive management in the hands of private enterprise."

"Whether we make the right use of this heaven-sent opportunity for redeeming the mistakes of the past by the use of the new power depends upon whether we use from the outset wise methods of regulation and control without sacrificing the driving powers of private enterprise."

"The arguments for government ownership," continued General Tripp, "can be easily demolished from a logical standpoint, but logic is not what supports the case for public ownership; it is really founded upon apprehension—a fear that such a great public national service in the hands of private capital would acquire so great a power that it cannot be prevented from exploiting the public by means and ways impossible to control."

The way to allay this apprehension and to prevent possibilities of public exploitation is to further develop our system of regulating public service corporations, which has so far proved sound and which can be extended to prevent any objectionable practices that may still continue or be devised in the future. In this way, both rapid and efficient electrical development and the protection of the public are assured.

U. S. Government Rests On Religion As Basis, Says Mr. Coolidge

He Tells Methodists It Was Nation's Foundation And Has Preserved It; Says Officials Need Faith

Washington, Oct. 15.—In an address delivered this afternoon in connection with the unveiling of an equestrian statue of Francis Asbury, first American Bishop of of the Methodist Episcopal Church, President Coolidge asserted that "our Government rests upon religion" and developed the theme to show that in our beginnings men like Dr. Asbury laid the foundation for the moral and spiritual trend of the people "which has had such a large influence in shaping the destiny of America."

The President did not touch directly upon the issue of religious freedom, but he sought to make clear that it was because of what Dr. Asbury and his associates and other religious organisations preached "that our country has developed so much freedom and contributed so much to the civilization of the world." It was well to remember this when seeking social reforms, the President said, and he followed with these statements:

"The government of a country never gets ahead of the religion of a country. There is no way by which we can substitute the authority of law for the virtue of men. Peace, justice, humanity, charity—these cannot be legislated into being; they are the result of a divine grace."

The unveiling ceremonies drew a large crowd to Sixteen and Mount Pleasant Streets, where the statue is erected. Many Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church were present. Bishop John W. Hamilton outlined Dr. Asbury's work in the trackless regions of America and the Rev. E. L. Wilson offered prayer. The statue was unveiled by Mrs. Kathryn Watson Van Ness of Baltimore.

The sculptor, Augustus Lukeman of New York, was presented to the President by Dr. James R. Joy. Bishop William F. McDowell made the presentation of the statue to the United States Government, and the speech accepting it was made by Colonel Charles O. Sherrill, U. S. A., Commissioner of Public Buildings and Grounds.

TEXT OF PRESIDENT'S SPEECH

President Coolidge's address was as follows:

This occasion cannot but recall to our minds in a most impressive way the sacrifice and devotion that has gone into the making of our country. It is impossible to interpret it as the working out of a plan devised by man. The wisest and most far-sighted of them had little conception of the greatness of the structure which was to arise on the foundation which they were making.

As we review their accomplishments they constantly admonish us not only that "all things work together for those who do good," but that in the direction of the affairs of our country there has been an influence that had a broader vision, a greater wisdom and a wider purpose than that of mortal man, which we can only ascribe to a Divine Providence.

A wide variety of motives has gone into the building of our Republic. We can never understand what self-government is or what is necessary to maintain it unless we keep these fundamentals in mind. To one of them Francis Asbury, the first American Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and his associates made a tremendous contribution.

Our Government rests upon religion. It is from that source that we derive our reverence for truth and justice, for equality and liberty and for the rights of mankind. Unless the people believe in these principles, they cannot believe in our Government.

There are only two main theories of government in the world. One rests on righteousness, the other rests on force. One appeals to reason, the other appeals to the sword. One is exemplified in a republic, the other is represented by a despotism. The history of government of this earth has been almost entirely a history of the rule of force held in the hands of a few. Under our Constitution America committed itself to the practical application of the rule of reason, with the power held in the hands of the people.

SAYS REVIVAL PRECEDED REVOLUTION

This result was by no means accomplished at once. It came about only by reason of long and difficult preparation, often times accompanied with discouraging failure. The ability for selfgovernment is arrived at only through an extensive training and education. In our own case it required many generations and we cannot yet say that it is wholly perfected.

It is of a great deal of significane that the generation which fought the American revolution had seen a very extensive religious revival. They had heard the preaching of Jonathan Edwards. They had seen the great revival meetings that were inspired also by the preaching of Whitefield. The religious experiences of those days made a profound impression upon the great body of the people. They made new thoughts and created new interests. They freed the public mind through a deeper knowledge and more serious contemplation of the truth. By calling the people to righteousness they were a direct preparation for self-government. It was for a continuation of this work that Francis Asbury was raised up.

The religious movement which he represented was distinctly a movement to reach the great body of the people. Just as our Declaration of Independence asserts that all men are created free, so it seems to me the founders of this movement were inspired by the thought that all men were worthy to hear the Word, worthy to be sought out and brought to salvation.

It was this motive that took their preachers among the poor and neglected, even to criminals in the jails. As our ideal has been to bring all men to freedom, so their ideal was to bring all men to salvation. It was pre-eminently a movement in behalf of all the people. It was not a new theory. The American Constitution was not a new theory. But like it, it was the practical application of an old theory, which was very new.

Just as the time was approaching when our country was about to begin the work of establishing a Government which was to represent the rule of the people, where not a few but the many were to control public affairs, where the vote of the humblest was to count for as much as the vote of the most exalted, Francis Asbury came to America to preach religion. He had no idea that he was preparing men the better to take part in a great liberal movement, the better to take advantage of free institutions, and the better to perform the functions of self-government. He did not come for political motives. Undoubtedly they were farthest from his mind. Others could look after public affairs. He was a loyal and peaceful subject of the realm.

He came to bring the Gospel to the people, to bear witness to the truth and to follow it wheresoever it might lead. Wherever men dwelt, whatever their condition, no matter how remote, no matter how destitute they might be, to

LAUDS DR. ASHBURY

For this work, the bearing of the testimony of the truth to those who were about to be, and to those who in his later years were sovereign American citizens, he had a peculiar training and aptitude. He was the son of a father who earned his livelihood by manual labor, of a mother who bore a reputation for piety. By constant effort they provided the ordinary comforts of life and an opportunity for intellectual and religious instruction.

It was thus that he came out of a house of the people. As early as the age of 17 he began his preaching. In 1771, when he was 26 years old, responding to a call for volunteers, he was sent by Wesley to America. Landing in Philadelphia, he began that ministry which in the next 45 years was to take him virtually all through the colonies and their western confines, and into Canada, from Maine on the north, almost to the Gulf of Mexico, on the south.

He came to America five years after the formation of the first Methodist Society in the City of New York, which had been contemporaneous with his own joining of the British Conference as an itinerant preacher and a gospel missionary. At that time it is reported that there were 316 members of his denomination in this country.

The prodigious character of his labors is revealed when we remember that he traveled some 6,000 miles each year, or in all about 270,000 miles, preaching about 16,500 sermons and ordaining more than 4,000 clergymen, besides presiding at no less than 224 annual conferences. The highest salary that he received was $80 each year for this kind of service, which meant exposure to Summer heat and Winter cold, traveling alone through the frontier forests, sharing the rough fare of the pioneer's cabin, until his wornout frame was at last laid to rest. But he left behind him as one evidence of his labors 695 preachers and 214,235 members of his denomination. The vitality of the cause which he served is further revealed by recalling that the 316 with which he began has now grown to more than 8,000,000.

His problem during the Revolutionary War was that of continuing to perform his duties without undertaking to interfere in civil or military affairs. He had taken for the text of his first sermon in America these very significant words:

"For I determined not to know anything among you save Jesus Christ and Him crucified."

When several of his associates left for England in 1775 he decided to stay. "I can by no means agree to leave such a field for gathering souls to Christ as we have in America," he writes. "Therefore I am determined by the grace of God not to leave them let the consequence be what it may."

CITES ADDRESS TO WASHINGTON

But he had no lack of loyalty to the early form of American government. When the inauguration of Washington took place on April 30, 1789, the Conference being in session, Bishop Asbury moved the presentation of a congratulatory address to the new President. His suggestion was adopted, and the Bishop, being one of those designated for the purpose, presenting the address in person read it to Washington.

How well he fitted into the scheme of things this circuit rider who spent his life making stronger the foundation on which our Government rests and seeking to implant in the hearts of all men, however poor and unworthily they may have seemed, an increased ability to discharge the high duties of their citizenship. His outposts marched with the pioneers, his missionaries visited the hovels of the poor, that all men might be brought to a knowledge of the truth.

A great lesson has been taught us by this holy life. It was because of what Bishop Asbury and his associates preached, and what other religious organisations through their ministry preached, that our country has developed so much freedom and contributed so much to the civilisation of the world.

It is well to remember this when we are seeking for social reforms. If we can keep in mind their sources we shall better understand their limitations. The government of a country never gets ahead of the religion of the country. There is no way by which we can substitute the authority of law for the virtue of man. Of course, we can help to restrain the vicious and maintain a fair degree of security and protection by legislation and police control, but the real reforms which society in these days is seeking will come as a result of our religious convicitions, or they will not come at all. Peace, justice, humanity, charity—these cannot be legislated into being. They are the result of a Divine Grace.

I have never seen the necessity for reliance upon religion rather than upon law better expressed than in a great truth uttered by Tiffany Blake of Chicago when he said:

An act of Congress may indicate that a reform is being or has been accomplished, but it does not itself bring about a reform.

A LESSON IN CONTENTMENT

Perhaps, too, there is a lesson in contentment in the life of this devout man. He never had any of the luxuries of this life. Even its conveniences did not reach him, and of its absolute necessaries he had a scanty share. Without ever having the enjoyment of a real home, constantly on the move, poorly clad, often wretchedly sheltered, much of the time insufficiently nourished, yet his great spirit pressed on to the end, always toward the mark of his high calibre. His recompense was not in the things of the earth.

Yet who can doubt, as he beheld his handiwork, as he saw his accomplishments grow, there came to him a glorious satisfaction and a divine peace. No doubt he valued the material things of this life, and certainly they ought to be valued greatly, but he regarded it as his work to put a greater emphasis on the things of the spirit. He sought to prepare men for the sure maintenance and the proper enjoyment of liberty, and for the more certain production and the better use of wealth, by inspiring them with a reverence for the moral values of life.

What a wonderful experience he must have had, this prophet of the wilderness! Who shall say where his influence, written upon the immortal souls of men, shall end? How many homes he must have hallowed! What a multitude of frontier mothers must have brought their children to him to receive his blessing!

It is more than probable that Nancy Hanks, the mother of Lincoln, had heard him in her youth. Adams and Jefferson must have known him, and Jackson must have have seen in him a flaming spirit as unconquerable as his own. How many temples of worship dot our landscape! How many institutions of learning, some of them rejoicing in the name of Wesleyan, all trace the inspiration of their existence to the sacrifice and service of this lone circuit rider! He is entitled to rank as one of the builders of our nation.

STRESSES INDIVIDUAL RESPONSIBILITY

On the foundation of a religious civilisation which he sought to build, our country has enjoyed greater blessings of liberty and prosperity than was ever before the lot of man. These cannot continue if we neglect the work which he did. We cannot depend on Government to do the work of religion. We cannot escape a personal responsibility for our own conduct. We cannot regard those as wise or safe counselors in public affairs who deny these principles and seek to support the theory that society can succeed when the individual fails.

I do not see how any one could re count the story of this early Bishop without feeling a renewed faith in our country. He met a multitude of storms. Many of them caused him sore trials. But he never wavered. He saw wars and heard rumors war, but whatever may have been the surface appearance, underneath it all our country manifested then, and has continued to manifest a high courage, a remarkable strength of spirit and an unusual ability, in a crisis, to choose the right course.

Something has continued to guide the people. No tumult has been loud enough to prevent their hearing the still small voice. No storm has been violent enough to divert inspired men from constantly carrying the Word of Truth. The contests of the day have but been preparations for victories on the morrow.

Through it all our country has acquired an underlying power of judgment and stability of action which has never failed it. It furnishes its own answer to those who would defame it. It can afford to be oblivious to those who would detract from it. America continues its own way unchallenged and unafraid. Above all attacks and all vicissitudes it has arisen calm and triumphant; not perfect, but marching on, guided in its great decisions by the same spirit which guided Francis Asbury.
